Lawson to reveal asset sales

By Frances Williams Economics Correspondent

Details of the Government's proposed £500m additional asset sales announced earlier this mouth are expected to be revealed today when Mr Nigel Lawson, the Chancellor, replies to a question in Parliament.

Top candidates are parts of the Government's existing shareholdings in privatized companies BP, where the state has a 39 per cent stake, Britoil (49 per cent) and Cable and Wireless (45 per cent).

It would be difficult for the Government to accelerate the planned privatization of such leading enterprises as Britisl Telecom, British Airways and the Royal orduance factories which are scheduled for next year. But it could decide to bring forward sales of smaller pieces of state industries and publicly-owned companies.

The Transport Department has already announced that it expects British Rail's Sealink subsidiary to be ready for privatization by the autumn.

Other possibles subsidiaries of BL such as Unipart, Jaguar and Land Rover and profitable parts of British Shipbuilders, British Steel, the National Bus Company and the British Airports Authority.

World alert over Armenian revenge

Every British embassy and consulate is un its guard against an unexpected attack by fanatical Armenian extremists in retaliation against the eight-year prison sentence passed on Zaven Bedros. The SAS is on special standby.

Bedros, aged 32, is a self-confessed member of the Armenian Secret Army for the liberation of Armenia, the terground nrganization which claimed responsibility for the bomb attack un the Turkish Airlines check-in at Orly airport in Paris 10 days ago, in which seven people died.

He flew to London last August, and the prosecution alleged during the trial that his mission involved the assassination of a senior Turkish diplomat. Bedros told the court he planned to take hostages in a commando-style siege of the Turkish Embassy in order to demand the release of Armenian prisoners in Turkey.

Wistow Colliery, the show-piece of British mining, which opened only four weeks ago at the Selhy coalfield, North Yorkshire, is to be out of action months" after weekend flooding. As water continued to seep ioto the pit, the National Coal Board confirmed that coal production would be halted, at a cost of £600,000 a week.

A spokesman said that the opening of the second set of 20 aces, scheduled for three to four months time as part of the total £1,000m project, could be delayed. "There may have to be some rethinking on this following the flooding," he said. As a major investigation got under way and emergency pumping continued, the NCB were trying last night to work out how the water got through 250 ft of rock and stone to the coal face.

"This is what is puzzling us. We never thought this was possible and are sure it is a unique problem. We have not heard of it ever happening "weeks, and possibly before", the spokesman added.

Mining engineers have so been unable to see the full extent of the damage in the pit. which contains £3m worth of equipment. But after moving in extra pumping equipment last night, they hope that hy today they will be able to examine the minc.

Since opening four weeks ago, Wislow, said by the NCB to have been "setting the standard for world mining", has been producing 20,000 tons of coal a week. The loss of coal production, which we put at £600,000 a week, is bad enough but what we are anxious to find out is why this has happened". the spokesman said.

Police are now less certain that there is a link between the murders of Caroline Hogg, aged five, and Susan Maxwell, aged

Mr Hector Clark, assistant chief constable of Northumbria, who is leading the inquiry into both deaths, said: "There are similarities but there are significant differences between the two cases."

Meanwhile, Interpol has traced Herr Fritz Witte, a West German tourist who stayed in a Portobello boarding house on the night Caroline Hogg, from Edinburgh, disappeared.

Detectives will fly out within the next few days to interview Herr Witte, who was found at his home in Witten, near Dortmund, only hours after his description was issued by the police.

Det Chief Supt Brian Cun-ningham said: "It is known that he spent three nights, including July 8 at the boarding house. He is one of the few people we have so far failed to interview."

He emphasized that at this stage the police simply wanted to eliminate Herr Witte from their inquiries.

On Saturday police had appealed for a man who was seen in Portobello on the evening of July 8.

Naturalists fear for future of bird refuge By High Clayton Environment Correspondent

Mudflats on the Tees estuary in Cleveland are at the centre of a conservation argument which could become as bitter as that about the Somerset Levels. The hird refuge on 400 acres of Seal Sands on the western side of the estuary are recognized officially in Britain as a site of special scientific interest.

They also make np one of fewer than 250 sites worldwide which are accepted as being wetlands of international importance for wildlife under the Ramsar convention of 1971. But naturalists fear that they are not being given enough protection against reclamation.

They are angry about a deal worked out at a meeting from which they were excluded. Local councils and the Tees and Hartlepool Port Authority were asked to the meeting by Mr William Waldegrave, a Parlia-mentary Under-Secretary at the Department of the Eoviron-Naturalists were worried about statutory powers which would enable the authority to start reclaiming the sands without consultation. The authority agreed at the meeting to submit any such proposal for planning approval, and so risk a

The Nature Conservancy Council, the main wildlife puango, decided in the light of that deal to reject appeals from naturalists to press the Government for a nature conservation order on the site. Such orders give ministers the toughest safeguards available under wildlife law, but are meant to be used only wheo important sites face immediate threats.

The council decided that the port authority's acceptance of a planning constraint meant that there was no immediate threat But Friends of the Earth insisted that a conservation order was essential.

Mr Christopher Rose, the organization's countryside campaigner, said: This new deal does not change the situation as far as nature conservation is concerned. Thousands of birds may perish because of Civil Service ineptitude and the minister's de-

Strauss meets Honecker in political about-turn

From Michael Binyon, Bonn

Prime Minister of Bavaria, yesterday had a private meeting with Herr Erich Honecker, the East German leader, at a hunting lodge near Berlin.

The meeting, rumoured for the past two weeks, comes after Herr Strauss's unexpected and controversial initiative in pro-posing a DM1.000m (about £250m) loan to East Germany and marks a political about-turn in relations between East and West Germany.

Herr Strauss was travelling with his wife and son through East Germany after making a private visit to Poland, where he also had talks with Cardinal Jozef Glemp, the Primate. Herr Strauss and his family were invited to have lunch with Herr Honecker nt Werbellinsee, where the East German leader has traditionally received West German politicians, including Herr Hans-Jochen Vogel, the Social Democratic leader, who visited earlier this year.

Fierce fighting in Kurdish mountains as Iraqis resist Iranian offensive an Iraqi counter attack in the Kurdish mountains of northern Iraq, where it launched a big offensive on Saturday.

The news agency Irna said Iranian troops beat back the Iraqi attack in a two-hour battle on Saturday night, killing more than 100 Iraqi soldiers and

In Baghdad a military spokesman said fierce fighting was still raging in the area early yesterday and Iraqi troops had killed more than 1,400 Iranians.

Before news of the Iraqi counter-attack reached Tehran, official Iranian communiqués said Iran had achieved the main objectives of the offensive, the first hig action in the 34-month Gulf war since battles farther south in April

The communiques said that after a day of fighting Iranian forces had captured a military base at Haj Omran, four miles inside Iraq. Iran says the base has supplied Kurdish rebels in Iran for the past three years.

The communiques said the Iranians had also taken the King Mountain heights, which overlook Haj Omran from peace-keeping force in Lebanon. He is a Vietnam veteran, so he will take the dangers of factional fighting and shelling in Lebanon in his stride.

Politically too, Mr MeFarlane is not without Middle East experience: in 1981 Mr Alexander Haig, then Secretary of State, sent him to Israel for delicate private talks with Mr Menachem Begin, the Prime Minister.

Mr Haig also used Mr McFarlane to develop a set of strategic options for dealing with Libya and Central America.

Some of Mr Reagan's conservative supporters criticized Mr Clark for appointing Mr McFarlane as his deputy (which title he will retain). Though some commentators consider him a hardliner in dealings with Moscow Mr McFarlane also has the reputation of being one of the more moderating influences in the White House on foreign policy and arms control. He told reporters that he had undertaken the new assignment with "a deep sense of convic-tion" that it "is incumbent on the United States to do everything, we possibly can, first, to bring peace to Lebanon" and then, to restore peace to the entire Middle East.

rebels in Uganda

From Charles Harrison

In the latest wave of killings in Uganda, 11 people were hacked to death at the Namalere agricultural research station, near here, by men described by the Government as bandits, its term for anti-Government guerrillas.

Radio Uganda said five of them were killed with axes, knives and other weapons in the officers' club at the station, while the others were attacked in houses nearby. The radio said some villagers were also killed in the same raid. The area is close to one where a similar attack was carried out a few weeks ago.

In the Luwero district, a few miles farther north, two oppo-sition MPs - Mr Kisamba Mugerwa and Mr Jol Senteza -have been arrested for allegedly cooperating with guerrillas.

AMHERIAN BOARD MEETING.

In any discussion on the choice of fuel there's one fact that emerges head and shoulders above the rest.

Coal is a considerably cheaper fuel than either oil or gas. But that's only the beginning of the story

THE CHANGING FACE OF COAL

There have been some impressive advances in boiler technology, combustion techniques and methods of coal and ash handling.

It's now possible to operate in excess of 80% thermal efficiency. Equally surprising is that in modern installations coal and ash are seldom seen and rarely touched by hand. And smoke is consumed within the boiler.

COAL. OUR ENERGY LIFELINE British Industry needs a modern, reliable and economical fuel to replace those that will dwindle in supply Coal is that energy lifeline. We are fortunate enough in Britain to have the resources to supply industry with coal for the next 300 years. At the Vienna Conference all EEC member countries agreed to reduce their reliance on imported oil; coal - the major alternative - makes Britain well placed as the largest and most efficient producer in Western Europe. Fine, you say, but what about the cost of converting to coal? You'll be pleased to know that there are several ways of effectively achieving an economic installation.

THE 25% GOVERNMENT GRANT SCHEME Basically this scheme can provide for up to 25% of the total project capital cost of making the change to coal.

All companies in the private manufacturing and most service industries are eligible. providing that oil and/or gas has been used to meet at least 75% of the process steam or heating requirements over the previous year. The scheme does not stop you benefitting from other grants (Regional Development Grants for example) for which you may qualify

HELP COMES FROM ALL OUARTERS

Apart from the grant schemes there are leasing arrangements that make converting to coal a lot easier on your cash flow. Further beneficial funding could come through the EEC. And the NCB is willing to enter into favourable medium and long-term supply arrangements with individual customers.

They also have to live with the uncertainties overhanging the Royal Festival Hall since the Greater London Council decided to take a more aggressive stance on its management. Indeed this final element may prove to be decisive. With the RFH weakened by poor attendances and the whim of local government politics, the Barbican management may take the view that now is the time to bid for supremacy. The Barbican as a whole is, after all, just beginning to prove that it can be reasonably successful. After two decades of defending its right to exist at all it could now find itself in a position to start dictating terms.

Rock

Hammersmith Odeon

Few rock groups depend as beavily for success oa an iotimate engagement wilb the emotions of the listener as Dire Straits, so it is a particular pleasure that they have man-aged, as a part of their rise to ecormous international cele-brity, to scale up their music to fit the huge areass in which they are oow obliged to perform. Last Christmas they conquered the aircraft-hanger ambience and dodgy acoustical response of Wembley Arena; on Saturday eveaing they made Hammersmith Odcon feel like the Marquee.

This is one of the measures of their maturity. Four years ago, at the time their second album was released, the Odcon was 100 big for them: the original quartet contorted itself into eliched and completely unsuitable rock-star postures in order to seem larger than life. Now, after a couple of personnel changes and with the vital addition of two keyboard players, they are able to relax. Superlative lighting, devised by Chas Hetherington with more than a nod (in the pin-spots and the subdued washes) to the Springsteen concerts of 1981, and amplification which combines power with absolute elarity provide a drama which allows the musicians to be themselves. They began with

The most fluently romantic of players, be sets his instrumeotal lyricism against a flat, roughbewn voice, the tension arising from the subconscious uoderstanding that the guitar express-es emotional nuances beyond the vnice's range. Although Knopfler still writes light-hearted throw-aways, such as "Twisting by the Pool" and Industrial Disease", his special-ity is naw the melodramatic set-piece, inspired by Enoio Morri-cone's soundtracks and by Roy Bittan's keyboard work with the E Street Band. "Tunnel of Love" and "Romeo and Juliet" are the best balanced of these; the former ended with the swooning playnut so cleverly used in the juke-box sequence of An Officer and a Gentleman; the latter moved, via a stuoning reading of "Love Over Gold". "The Sultans of Swing" was turned ioto a blazing guitar feature, while Portobello Belle", with the addition of Mel Collins on also saxophone, was described by Knppfler as "Irish reggae", but bore a strong resemblance to the "Caledonia soul" of Van Morrison's recent music. "Private Investigations" and "Telegraph Road" were the most theatrically staged but, perbaps because of their subject matter, did not quite touch the heart so affectingly. As the bnuse lights came up and the road crew began to dismantle the equipment, the band played us bome with Knnpfler's music for Local Hero: a neat touch.

By Pete Townshend

Tomorrow Mick Jagger, singer of the Rolling Stones, will be 40 years old. Apart from the fact that 40 is a nice round number, it also signifies the twentieth year of the Stones' career. Looking for a maxim suitable to open an article in which I will try hard to find some reason why these events should be of interest. I came across a Proverb (22:6) in the May issue of Awake: "Train a boy according to the way for him; even when he grows old he will not turn aside from it.

The reason The Times is an appropriate place for me to be airing my thoughts at this telling moment in rock history is that on June 30, 1967. my groop. The Who. took an advertisement in the Evening Standard to protest against the savage sentences meted out to Mick Jagger and Keith Richards for possession of drugs. We really thought we were going ont on a limb, attracting the attention of the police and the press, and probably opening ourselves up for similar husts.

On the following day, however, The Times went one better. The Editor himself, William Rees-Mogg, wrote a leading article - now legendary in rock music circles - titled "Who Breaks A Butterfly On A Wheel?" Its demands that Jagger should be treated like any other young man, and that tolerance and equity should be a part of our traditional values of justice, were vital. I am pretty sure that without it Jagger

They become total celebrities only when trying to do something absurd like get married, deal with a drink problem or face a court case of some sort.

I have known Jagger since 1963 or 64. Our relationship is fairly distant and although we call nurselves friends, we are nnt in the traditional sense so. Mick is often described as lonely, but I dnn't think he is. One of the nhstacles to the deepening of his older friendships is his constant movement. He was wriggling like an eel when I first laid eyes on him. Having heard all about this splendid animal from the girls at my art college. I saw him face to hum for the first time at St Mary's Ballroom in Putney in the winter of 1963, where the Stones were dning a show to promote their first single, "come nn," and we, The Whn, were their support.

Mick was dning the Twist at the side nf the stage. It was a satirical version of the dance: he was throwing his gangling arms from side to side. pursing his lips and making the girls around him laugh. His hum, such as it is. was thrust nut like a baboon's. We all laughed. The curtains were closed; io front of them, the audience nur band had unnecessarily tried to warm up were already screaming. Jagger knew everynne was watching, so he hammed it up a little hit-more, getting his blood and adrenalin flowing for the show. Befnre the curtains even opened he was at full tilt – a complete exhibitionist.

Jagger once claimed, as I have done, that he had thrught about becoming a journalist before be became a musician. I have the feeling that for noce in my life I am getting to the post first. In most other respects, Jagger beat me to it. He heard rhythm and blues before I did, played it before I did, made a million before I did, went to America before I did, got takeo for a fnol hy Alan Klein before I did, met Rnbert Fraser before I did, tried LSD, DMT, cocaine, marijuana, and so on before I did. He probably had a hundred groupies before I even poured nne a polite drink back in the Holiday Inn. But I have stopped living for rock and roll before he bas.

Living in Ealing in 1963, I used occasinnally to see the Stones as they gathered near the Ealing Cluh to go off to Soho for rehearsals. They were staggering to look at, even to an art student like me who had seen lots of men with long hair and had even met a junkie or two. When I first saw Jagger close up on stage at Putney, I thought I

The importance of our celebrities' hehaviour in private and pohlic, and the responsibilities involved in reporting that behaviour, is something I want to try to get to grips with here, having just waded through five or six hiographies of debatable value. Jagger has lived for a long time at the spearhead of the rock hosiness, examined and vilified, coveted and giorified. He has been paid well, and can certainly exercise power within society and among his friends. His charisma seems to have effected a pecoliar unanimity of approach among his hiographers: they have always concentrated on his wilder, glamorous attributes, even though his fortieth birthday birthday sees him more mature, less mysterious, more affable and less self-indulgent. Because Jagger is a rock star we are a little surprised hy the idea that he might slow down and round out like everyone else in the world at middle age, but remember the proverh ... there is no one to when it can more perfectly be applied than

Back, then, to the biographies and press clippings; there must be something there that explains why it is so significant that Mick Jagger is 40 years old.

Is he really a ruthless, scheming, vain, duplicitous, sex-mad, cowardly swine?

I spent so much of my youth wanting to look striking or beautiful that it was years before I realized that I was not exactly average looking, and nnt exactly ugly. I knnw nnw, approaching 40 myself, that the way a person looks is really not at all important, hut when I am with Jagger I do love to look at him. He is still very beautiful in my eyes; much has been said of his "androgynous" attraction, and I suppose my response to his physical presence confirms all that. Jagger is also such a charismatic person that he could easily make you forget his looks. I cannot forget, though, the way Jagger looked on the stage at St Mary's Ballroom in Putney. A gangly young man doing the Twist inspired me to commit myself completely to the rock and roll stage.

Wading through all the biographies about Jagger and the Stones, I get the feeling I am reading only what the biographers expected would be remembered. If, like Tony Sancbez, they are close enough to the band for their memories to be accurate, all they seem to be able to remember are scoring the drugs and being a "comfort" to neglected girlfriends. If, like Carey Schofield, they are too young to have had first-band knowledge, they tend simply to read everyone else's books and the collected press cuttings. (She poses glamorously on her own book jacket opposite Jagger - a peculiarly sullen girl.) What I want to say here in contrast is something fresh and vital, Jagger (left) with Townshend: can rock stars still act like adolescents when they are suffering from mid-life crises? with Jagger.

The relationships between rock stars are peculiar. Jagger and David Bowie are twn of the few people in the mainstream of rock to wbom I can talk in the knowledge that they understand precisely what I mean when I talk about pressure, creative problems or irritations with the press. I am anxious. tberefore, not to alienate Jagger. about him that I can make known bere. Or running his fingers around the tnps of champagne glasses and making them ring piercingly? He is also a terrible name-dropper. Once on Concorde he pointed nut to me that Britt Ekland was travelling a few rows ahead without make-up. Jagger does have hundreds of small, worrying faults like these, but none of the incredibly beautiful women that fill his

Another fact, emphasized constantly in the biographies, that I feel I have to dive-bomh is the way Jagger and, later, Keith Richards have been prepared to sacrifice anynne around them for success and control of the band. Aspects of this contention could be true: when Brian Jones was being edged nut of the band, I remember how much he seemed to want my friendship he, was insecure and lonely. But in nrder to get Jagger's and Richards's apparent brutality into scale, I must repeat a story about my form master at grammar school.

In the last term (1960) I had taken tn wearing my navy-hlne blazer adorned with hreakfast cereal droppings and egg ynlk. The headmaster had asked me to take a little mnre pride in my appearance: "For heaven's sake, Townsend, couldn't ynu just wipe a damp clnth over it every now and then? You look like yon've been dropped into a dustbin." My form master felt there was more to my lack nf pride than met the eye. He took me aside one day. "Townshend," be said meaningfully, "I knnw why ynu leave egg stains on your jacket, milk dribbles in the lap of your grey flannels and tea stains nn your shirt. Shall I tell ynu why you do it?" He asked me in such a way that I had no choice but to request illnmination, so I asked, "Yes, sir. Please do." "Because, Townsbend, it's your perverted way of saying to the world, 'Look at me - I'm dangerous!' "

I was confused. "Dangerous, sir? Having egg yolk on my blazer?" "Yes, Townshend, you believe it makes you look dangerous.'

I really did not understand what be was saying, believing instead that he was being deeply ironic. The penny dropped when I told a friend of Edwardian inclinations about it and he said that the master had told him the same thing - in his case, that he dressed like a Teddy Boy because it made him look dangerous. In fact be had taken every single boy in the class aside during that last term and told them that they looked the way they did because they wanted to appear dangerous - even those who were very, very neat and conventional. We were all very impressed with our master's perspicacity. We all were, of course, they have set up a very real rapport quite dangerous-looking, we knew that, and come close to the real man behind

Practically the whole of the Stones' image is rooted in this rather boyish philosophy: that people will believe you are what you believe you appear to be. Some people close to the Stones say that Keith Richards is genuinely as he appears to be; bearing in mind some of the terrifying stories I could tell about Jagger really the ruthless, conniving, duplicitous, scheming, evil-touched, money-greedy, sex-mad, cowardly, vain, power-bungry swine his biograpbers and the newspaper hounds bave

So, with only their famous com-patriot's goodwill in mind, they intercede, they advise and warn. When their well-meant good advice is ignored, they scuttle off to the nearest newspaper and tell all; in particular, how their own compassionate care was wasted and unrewarded.

So much for friends - but, incredibly, many journalists also feel they have a privileged relationship with Jagger. He is so courteous and gentlemanly that, even though he is well known for fielding any and every direct question he does not like, someone interviewing him will feel the image.

It is only the conceit of these pathetic individuals that prevents me from feeling totally sympathetic with them - after all, it is not so different believing oneself to be a close friend of Mick's when in fact one is kept hanging on purely because one has bim, that is a possibility. It hurts me especially because no one ever huthers to show ones are those 'close friends' whn any interest in what I said to my become absessed to protect their girlfriend after we made love 15 years famnus buddies from the sycophants ago. I have to spread my own malicious rumnurs about myself.

I nnly want to celebrate my friend's fortieth birthday, to rally one and all to do the same. To avoid judging either his complexion or his waistline, his future or his past, his genius or his despotism. I want to ask everyone to turn away from the biographics and their serializations written by friends cast aside, jnurnalists in newspaper cuttings libraries and simple hacks nn the make. Degas said that everyone has talent at 25 but the difficulty is having it at 50. Mick will still be beautiful when he is 50, still one of the nriginal rock writers who discovered the new song form that embodied a width of human passion only before contained in poetry. His talent will be as strong at 50 as it is today at 40 because his amnitinn is not dependent on his youth, his song writing in the rock genre is not dependent on his own suffering and his drive to be popular and inved is not dependent on his personal insecurity.

I believe that rock music is art; especially because it attempts to share passion rather than demonstrate stances. Everyone has his own definition of art and mine is neatly contained in the song form that emerged in pop music during the early 1960s. At some point I would enjoy taking up another of your mnrnings justifying my claim, but despite the fact that I believe Mick Jagger to be a significant and genuinely inspired artist who often creates great work, the whole precept would probably bore Jagger himself, so I will desist.

He sees himself as an entertainer, thus a servant of sorts. And yet it still serves us well to remember, on the fortieth birthday of this successful man, that William Rees-Mogg in 1967 entreated us "to ensure that Mr Jagger is treated the same as anyone else, no better and no worse."

So I shall invite him down to the pub, buy bim a pint, talk about how well he always does his job, and never mention the old days again.

l'indifférence

Nobody remains indifferent to the music of Wagner, wrote Bernard Levin the other day; even if you doo't love it, you find yourself hating it. I fell ioto a reverie when I read these words, as I often do at the beginning of an article on Wagner, and started doing something else: namely, reflecting on the number of times in my life I had been told that I would either hate or love, but not be indifferent to, something.

Among the things with such magical power of attraction or repulsion are: mushrooms, spinach, Victoriao architecture, sailing, the novels of Henry Green.

The Goon Show, oysters, New York.

Pernod, malt whisky, ballet, jazz, science fiction, the coooty of Dorset, the people of Wales, the ex-pupils of Winchester, the music of Stravinsky, Maltesers, the smell of chrysanthemums, crosswords, the kind of people who play Rugby, Scottish country dancing, smoked salmon and Scrabble. Reflecting on this list, I discovered that the "either you hate or love" theory is absolutely crackers. Almost everything on it is something I quite like. Or like sometimes but oot others. Or like some of. but not all of. Even the three things I like most oo the list - jazz, malt whisky and The Goon Show - sometimes leave me quite cold.

Take oysters. I can remember distinctly the first time I ate an oyster. Ten years ago. when William Davis was editor of Punch and I was his uoderling, someone sent him a crate of oysters which, with typical generosity, he shared out among the staff who had out yet good home. I was the only one left to the building - I had probably just arrived for work - and he brandished a dripping molluse at me. "Like oysters?" he

"I don't know. I've never had one." He goggled it was rather like never having travelled first class on a plane. "Well, have one. You'll either hate it or

I had one. It was quite nice.

Well?"

"It's ... all right."
Fatal. When someone tells you it's a love-or-hate object, he's very hurt to be told it's all right, and nothing more. Jazz and Wagner lovers don't mind people hating jazz and Wagner; it's taking it or leaving it they can't stand. I imagine that God is infuriated by agnosticism more than when it came to sailing. I was wiser. I got mixed up in a sailing crowd five years ago. Oh, you'll either hate it or lave it, they told me. I nodded sagely. I knew that meant I'd quite like it. In fact, the truth about sailing, as I later found out, was that yoo love it; but not till afterwards, and I can still remember tossing around in a yacht one night near the end of a cross-Channel trip to Le Havre. -

It was wet and cold and rough, and everyone had retired below except me and the captain. Brian. We took it in turns in watch the lights of Le Havre get no nearer. Big ships came past ignoring us, waves came past ignoring us, the lights of Le Havre ignored us.

It took us five very long hours to beat through the combined indifference of the elements to moor in Le Havre at after 2 am, and the whole experience was dreadful. But before I went to sleep I said to myself: "In the morning, I'm going to think back and say that it was quite an enjoyable experience. I must remember that it was oothing of the kind." I don't sail any more, and I don't miss it much, and I never did love or hate Wagner, and I doo't miss that much either. The trouble with me is something that is unimaginable to the opera-lover: I am left cold by the convection of classical singing. I find the kind of voice used in opera or lieder highly artificial and unappealing, just as other people find nothing to enjoy in the saxophone, the cello, the electric guitar or brass bands. On the one occasion I was taken to hear part of The Ring. I sat transfixed by what George Solu was doing with the orchestra, but went to sleep every time I transferred my attention to the stage. I felt as distanced from what they were doing as I expect I would from a Japanese Noh play.

I am told that you either hate or love Japanese Noh plays. Well, I have been told so often that I will hate or love something that by now I can take it or leave it. The main thing to remember is to say that you either hate or love it. It's agnostics like me that people can't stand.

nust declare my aversion to the telephone wering machine, and suggest that I am, not se. To me it has always seemed to be the tronic equivalent of having the front door ned to you hy a filing cabinet, which is not an erience I relish, even at the swishest of ischolds. For a start, the instant nature of the phoce gives it a certaio informality, which is rly receged upon by the usually stiff and frozen sting locked into the other end with it.

I know that apologists for the machine will tell you that it is a splendid ally in the war on waste, that you can maximize your use of the hours in the day by "being available" at all times, and I have no doubt that in the commercial context this is true Manufacturers and retailers will tell you that once their users have overcome their early misgivings about installing these aliens on the premises; they soon come to wonder how they ever cooducted their businesses without them.

All of which may be true, but does out overcome the caller's problem of being confronted by a vocal disembodiment of the person he seeks. How are you to ope with the once garulous collegers who has suddenly taken it into his head.

colleague who has suddenly taken it into his head to say: "Please speak slowly and please speak oow. Beep?" Just as there are ground rules for the owner of the machine, so there are patterns of response among callers.

There is, for example, the refusnik, the caller beeps and he hangs up. This has substantial annoyance value against the user, as some machines, particularly the older varieties, can be mechanically thrown by such non-co-operation. Moreover, the owner returns to find mere silence where he had hoped for some earnest of a meal or is bloodless piece of technology makes Ian a deal. For him this is the equivalent of opening an acDonalds of Robert Robinsons. It is an envelope with a portentous postmark only to discover a blank sheet of paper inside. The most dedicated of refusniks argue that their tactic has the merit of trading anonymity for anonymity and are universally unpopular with users.

Then there is the wag, also a tiresome customer, who attempts levity or irreverence wheo his solemn one sounds. The wag falls into a number of categories; these include the fellow who tries to pass himself off as an answering machine: "Mr X regrets he is unable to speak to telephone answering machines and will call again in the hope of finding you in. Beep."

Of course, the wag's clothes have been stoleo to some extent by those users who attempt to huminize the whole procedure by their "jokey" recordings. See Oz Clarke below. Io America this is all getting quite out of hand. Unsavoury greetings abound, such as this one, a la Mario Puzo: "Ring back pronto, schmnck or I'll send the boys round to hreak both yer legs".

Then there is the smoothie, usually a bit of a technocrat himself, who enters into the spirit of the game. He has oo compunction about twirling on his revolving chair and MacDonald-speaking his memorandum ioto the void Indeed, he relisbes the act, in-feeding the hour of his call (24-hour clock ref, of course), place of origin, and spray of poss oos where contactable. He is user's friend oumber one, the fellow who makes it all worthwhile, and entre nous, a bit of a creep.

Like it or not, the answering machine is proliferating. People call them answerphones, hut that is, strictly speaking, a solecism. It is like calling vacuum cleaners Hoovers, for Ansafone is ooe manufacturer among many, the senior rival in field swelled by British Telecom's relaxation on the sale restrictions of such equipment. The proper generic term for the devices is telephone answering machines, or TAMS for short, and the market has been flooded by, to name but a few brands, Recordacall, Answercall, GMTC '83, Panasonic, Binatone, and Call Jotter.

My own favourite mechanical voice, all too soon expunged, is that belonging to the polite young woman at the Financial Times information service. Somewhere between the drachma and the yen, things went badly wrong for her, and the cool tones, which seemed to speak of sensible dresses and cucumber sandwiches, gave way to a four-letter expletive in the best Nixonian traditions. The tape went round several times in this condition before the word was deleted, and the hrokers of the world were jamming the switchboard in wonder.

I phoned her up to congratulate her on her welcome fallihility and she had the grace not to swear at me. Instead she explained, very unrecordedly, that there had been a technical error. When I asked her what sort, she replied:
"The technical error was that I said: "!" And then she said it again.

Now I do a rather hysterical one, all in a rush, pleading with the caller not to ring off just because it's a machine. Perhaps it's time for a change again: I like doing lots of different accepts. I hope it will be funny. The trouble is if you're too clever it baffles people and they don't say anything at all. when we first had the machine we played around with it a lot and used to come home every evening to see the red light - and listen to lots of hleeps. My father is very funny; he leaves a very stiff, formal message saving "This is your father speak-ing". But the trouble with funny messages is that they're only funny with friends or people who know you: people who don't might by put off and leave no message at

I've no wish to knock answering machines; if they suit you that's fine. In our experience, how-ever, seven out of 10 people who ring and find an answering machine, ring off – and it is infuriating not to know who called, when and why. We provide the personal touch and we can elicit a response from a caller, even one who is reluctant to give one. Our operators are all taught the basic training code – to remember the three Ws. who called, trhat they wanted and where they can be reached.

We select our staff by interview, but we don't necessarily look for trained telephone operators (it's successfully I almost flct like ringing them to give then a job! People think of themselves as articulate you see, hut talking to another person, even if he doesn't say a lot - just a few "mms" and "yeses" is quite different from talking to a machine. Why does Viki do all the messages? Well 1 think it's People help you out machines don't. Most people ramble a lot, too, when they're leaving a message, probably because she tends to which is natural. But the end of the message is the most difficult: you get the most intelligent people leaving a reasonable message and them making a real mess of the end, I herself up. I have done one but it had an accident. The most depresssuppose because I use them quite a lot at work I doo't get oervous talking to a machine - io fact a all those people trying to get hold of you while you're out, but wheo you've got one you often get home to find cobody's called! I've got into a lot of trouble with my machine message. At my old recording studio the three of us went on holiday at the same time because the air-conditioning had conked out. I left an "ello 'ello, 'owin' to a modification in our ventilatin' system we 'ave 'ad to scarper to sunnier climes..."

message, using lots of mechanical jargon. (I said I'd gooe to the Caribbean because it sounded better than Majorca.) Three weeks later when I returned it was to be met hy a large policeman at Gatwick Airport, where I was held for questioning. It seems that lots of people had rung and got the message and passed the number on to their friends. One was a flight engineer on a 707 who took it into his head that it was a bomb scare in code (there were lots about at the time). It took a long time explaining to the Old Bill that there was oothing sinister in the message: They even held up the Jumbo until they were sure. We put on sensible messages after that, for a while. Then I couldn't resist doing another "'ello 'ello, this is a hurglar speakin'... there's no-one 'ere at present but if you don't tell the occupants, I'll leave your name and number with this nice arrestin' officer." A bit of a goof; we got a lot of people worried and another rollicking from the law. Now I've got one where I sort of blow a fanfare, give the name of the company in a kind of "Roll up, roll up" voice, ask them to leave a message and do another fanfare. I'm just a red-beaded, Irish, wine-loving, tennis-playing actor/writer who likes the freedom an answering machine gives - and who can't resist the chance of a few gags. Let me see if I can remember some of them.

Well, I went to Autralia in February so naturally wheo I got back Les Pattersoo answered the phone with "gedday" and a lot of chat – then I was in France, and oo my return he was still answering, talking about the land of the garlic caters and all those oasty gallic hahits... And then their's one character I'm particularly fond of, Sir Deirdre Spittle - he's always

Sir Deirdere is always terribly slurred - says things like "Le beaujolais nouveau est arrive" (when has clearly already had six houles of the stuff). I did try it straight once, said something like carry it off. And then I melted the machine drying it in fron of a fire and I was mortified, so then we had a "requiem for my machine. I get lots of shrieks and giggles and camp messages - and some brilliant ones. British Telecom used to ring up a lot. One is one and all alone

Neil Kinnock, Roy Hattersley, Barbara Windsor and I might all have turned out-differently if it had, not been for the only, child syndrome. Sole-recipient of our pareots' love, pride, anxicty and forebodings, the child-hood of a one and only is constantly under the spotlight, one's every action deemed worthy of notice, whether critical or approving. No wonder, we're different from other people.

There is impressive evidence to show that only children get more than their fair share of life's prizes. Tool surprisingly, since they start out with more than their fair share of I attention and encouragement. The only child is becoming increasingly fashiooable throughout the western world; already, in Germany, nearly half of all babies are born to women who don't plan on any further visits to the maternity hospital. This trend "has been linked to the rise in twoincome families, who think that a one-child household won't disrupt the pattern of their working lives' unduly.

Maybe not, hut it will certainly alter the pattern of their emotional one. My own parents had not a moment's peace for fear that my life might pass out of their expert hands. To their full-time paid jobs, they added another, unpaid and quite thankless, of getting me raised to perfection.

As I got older, this came to mean shielding me from unsuitable young. men, uosuitable, in their book, not necessarily meaning one who was reckless, improvident or uncaring, hut one who didn't aonounce his ... five-year plan to hand me the sun, moon and stars,

A perfect trinity of mutual love

Iris Murdoch, another only child, said that she and her parents lived in a perfect trinity of mutual love. Others of us lived in a hellish threesome of mutual conflict; parents and child horribly obsessed with each other's shortcomings. At the time, I reeked of self-pity, longing to trade in my lone star status for equal hilling among a group of siblings. Decades later, the pity is all for my parents, their whole investment sunk in one sulky daughter. How much nicer for them to have had a choice of child for company. For in a nulti-child setup, the temporary vileness of one is ffset by the equally temporary delightfulness of another.

The rebellious only child, refuses to live by its parents' rules, carries a niggling burden of guilt. By insisting on the right to my own opinions and tastes. I knew I was consigning my parents to oblivion; there were no other inheritors to carry on their point of view.

Once, having listened to me make an appeal for funds for the local Labour Party, a friend asked my somewhat conservative mother. 'Aren't you proud of her?". 'No', said my saddened parent. I just wonder where I went wrong. Had I had sisters one of them might have made her happy by turning out like ; Lady Olga Maitland.

Only children do well because have been brought up to think of ourselves as extra special. The dark side of this coin gives us a dreaded fear of failure. How can we possibly repay all those years of undivided attention by turning ont ordinary?

Only children are good fighters

Ooly children grow up to be good fighters - we have had years of practice learning to hold on to our own small corner.

My best friend grew up in a family of eight. Very oasty it was too, she claims, all that teasing and squabbling and having to fight for attention. When we compare our upbringing, it seems to me that my parents put in more time rearing the single apple of their eye then hers ever did on bringing up their huge brood. Perhaps parenthood, like practically everything else, obeys Parkinson's Law - "work expands to fill the time available" and all those couples planning an economy-sized single child family are oot going to find it a very time-saving operation after all.

Since, is then, his views have been vindicated at hy ooe report "Popular TV and Schoolchildren", published by the Department of Education and another, on equally damning lines, to be published soon, written by the

London's burning Londoners spend a lot of time craving hot weather, but on the rare occasions when the real thing comes, they are nonplussed and really rather wish it would go away. They may be just that bit cooler now, but still they spill disgruntled out of pubs into streets never meant for basking; still the traffic is more unpleasant than usual cab-drivers nastier, their fares readier to bolt into the steamy middle distance rather than settle up after an unpleasant ride. The summer sales are uncharacteristically languid in the absence of air-conditioning and even the heauties in cosmetics and perfumery wilt like sweetpeas preparing to set pods. "At least Harrods is worse", one of Selfridge's exoties sighs wearily at me. There are literary precedents. Galsworthy wrote "Summer, summer, summer! The soundless footsteps on the grass!" to signal an imminent death. After the mid-1970s heatwaves Paul Theroux wrote that London was really "designed for grim weather, not crowds ... best in drizzle or gleaming darkly under a thin layer of ice", Heat only "started the poisons in the hricks and woke the smell of dccay". "Is there no change of death in paradise?" Wallace Stevens wondered, "Does ripe fruit never fall? Or do the boughs hang always heavy in that perfect sky, unchanging...?"

As Alan Franks reported on this page on Saturday, rivalry is intense between television companies engaged on Orwellian projects for 1984. Yet in the field there is some cooperation. Steve Wadhams, working for CBC, unearthed a prospectus Orwell's formative prep school. St Cyprians, dating back to the time when young Eric Blair was a pupil there. One of the Arena team asked Wadhams if they could use his find. The deal was clinched - for half a pint of larger. I think Orwell would have approved.

Australian health authorities are hot on the trail of a killer: sweet and sour possum. Already 700 kilograms of possum meat from Tasmania have been recovered from Chinese restaurants and Asian foodmarkets around Melbourne. One meat wholesaler had openly advertised possums at $10 a carcass. The Victorian health minister says scarily: "Toxoplasmosis from possums can cause blindness, brain defects and death". It may reassure him to know that in Tennessee, possum and sweet taters is a classic dish.

The South African stranglehold was relaxed after the meeting in a Johanneshurg hotel on June 3 between Mr Pik Botha, the South African Foreign Minister, and Evaristus Sekhonyana, his Lesotho counterpart, at which each side agreed to take steps to prevent its territory from being used as a base for subversion against the other.

It is believed that Mr Botha gave Mr Sekhonyana the names of several ANC operatives alleged by Pretoria to be planning further guerrilla attacks on South Africa, and asked for help in flushing them out. The implied quid pro quo was that Pretoria would curb the activities of the Lesotho Liberation Army of Ntsu Mokhehle, a long-standing political foe of Chief Leahua Jonathan, Lesotho's Prime Minister, Mr Mokhehle is thought to operate from South Africa.

The agreement quickly foundered. In the second half of June and early July there were reports of a series of clashes between the 1,500-man Lesotho paramilitary force and groups of "bandits", culminating in a two-day battle with 30 gunmen who were said in Maseru, Lesotho's

The South Africans responded with a strongly worded Note to the United Nations dismissing Lesotho's allegations and warning that if Chief Jonathan continued to provide "sanctuary to terrorists operating against South Africa be should be surprised if South Africa takes the required action to eliminate them."

This was followed by a remarkable attack on Chief Jonathan in Current Affairs, a usually turgid weekly commentary put out hy the South African Broadcasting Corporation which closely reflects govern-ment thinking. It painted a picture of the "portly premier", grimly hanging on to power after 13 years without elections in the face of widespread popular discontent, and said that he had become a menace to the stability of southern Africa.

About a week later, Charles Mofeli, a leading opposition MP in Maseru was expelled from Lesotho's parliament for criticizing the ANC presence in his country in an interview with the SABC. Mr Mofeli been dismissed from Chief Jonathan's cabinet a few months earlier for advocating the establishment of diplomatie relations with

The current hostile phase in relations between South Africa and Lesotho began last December with the South African commando raid on alleged ANC "nests" in Maseru in which 42 people were killed, 12 of them Lesotho civilians. Most of the rest were ANC members, although how many were active guerrillas remains a matter for conjecture.

been flown to safety elsewhere There are, however, nearly 11,000 South African blacks in exile in Lesotho, which continues to insist stoutly on its right to shelter refugees, even if they are ANC members, while denying that it allows its territory to be used as a base for guerrilla activity.

Chief Jonathan thumbed his nose at the South Africans even more provocatively by touring communist hlock countries earlier this year and inviding the Soviet Union, China, North Korea, Yugoslavia and Rumania to open embassies in

By myiting the Russian bear into the very heart of the laager itself. Chief Jonathan has powerfully reinforced Pretoria's paranoia about Moscow-inspired subversion, and also risked alienating Lesotho's stannchy anti-communist Roman Catholie church, which has the support of about 40 per cent of the population.

Chief Jonathan's defiance of Pretoria has done wonders for his international image. From a tinpot dietator leading one of the most pliant of South Africa's pliant states, he has been trasmogrified into an heroic African David battling the white Goliath of apartheid. He has even established a new rapport with Lesotho's King Moshoeshoe, a scholarly recluse whom the Prime Minister stripped of his powers a decade ago.

But it is a dangerous game, Pretoria could crush Lesotho at will, and is perhaps deterred from doing do only by some lingering concern for world opinion. The small kingdom could be throttled to death within weeks if South Africa were to After the raid, between 60 and 100

If ecomomic measures of this kind were not enough to bring Chief Jonathan to hell, there would remain the option of further military action and possibly the engineering of a coup to replace the troublesome enief with someone more to South Africa's liking. Nisu Mokhehle, might seem an unlikely candidate but his personal hatred of Chief Jonathan and hostility to the ANC and Moscow (his sympathies lying with the breakaway, China-backed Pan-Afrikaanist Congress) could provide the basis for an alliance of convenience with Pretoria. Meanwhile other black states in the region are watching the unequal contest with interest. All are vulnerable too, and dependent on, South Africa in varying degrees, and all are hosts, some more reluctant than others, to substantial numbers of South African exiles, many of whom fled abroad in the aftermath of the 1976-77 riots in Soweto and other black townships. Some, like Mozamhique, have already felt the lash of South African strength. Most also believe that South Africa is actively promoting insurgent movements in their own countries.

The country whose situation most closely resembles that of Lesotho in Swaziland, which is ideally located as an ANC infiltration route from marxist Mozambique into northern Natal, the eastern Tranvaal and the industrial heartland of the Witwatersrand. The present interregnum regime in Swaziland, however seems fairly responsive to South African pressure, probably because it is still hoping for the transfer to it of large chunks of South African Zuln and Swazi tribal territory.

No country can feel safe, however Lesotho could well be a test case of just how far Pretoria is prepared to go in using its military and economic power to bludgeon its neighbours into adopting a more pliant attitude. South African military leaders believe, rightly or wrongly, that if neighbouring countries can be closed to the ANC as boltholes and sanctuaries, the internal guerrilla threat will wither away. Only behind a protective shield of subversion-proof military steel, it is argued, can true reform be undertaken. The steel is very much in evidence. What is much less

Reagan's backyard pathway to war?

Where is the Reagan Administration's hard-line policy against the Sandinista government of Nicaragua taking us? Public opinion in the United States seems not much concerned, but the Mexican Govern-ment fears that Reagan's militaristic approach may lead to war between Nicaragua and Honduras at almost

This is not an abstract worry. Commenting on Rengan's new commission on Central America, to be headed by Dr Henry Kissinger, a high Mexican official said the problem was too urgent to wait for the commission's scheduled report in December. War could come before then he said, if the CIA-sponsored Contras continue their incursions into Nicaragua from their sanctuaries in Honduras.

War is clearly in the mind of Daniel Ortega Saavedra, too. As the coodinator of the Sandinista junta. be warned the Nicaraguan people to prepare for more fighting, in a speech marking the fourth anniver-sary of the revolution that brought the junta to power. Nicaraguan officials have been openly predicting a United States-supported invasion from Honduras.

But that is not the only way war could start. The border clashes could get out of control on either side. Or the Nicaraguans might stride into Honduras, although they are not believed to be eager to bring on an open clash with the United States.

However it begins, in the Mexican view, such a Central American war would be a disaster, and far more of a threat to United States interests and those of other nations in the region than the Sandinista regime in a small, impoverished country could ever be.

The United States certainly could not remain unengaged in a Nicara-guan war. Having armed and equipped the Contras, including many elements of the old oppressive Somoza government, overthrown in 1979 by the Sandinistas, and having led Honduras from a weak hut democratic form of government toward right-wing military leadership. Washington could scarcely abandon its ally if war broke out. And it is by no means clear that such a war could be fought for long, much less won, without United States troops coming to the aid of Honduran forces generally considered ineffective.

Depending on the extent of Washington's participation and the threat to Nicaragua. Cuba would almost surely be drawn in to some tas to power, as well as to sustain them for four years, Fidel Castro would be forced to come to their assistance, although some analysts think that the last thing he, too, wants is an opeo clash with the Cuba's participation in a Central American war, of course, would raise the question of the Soviet Union's response. Even if it were only to send arms and supplies, that would lead to a direct Soviet-American confrontation that no one

Even if the most dangerous sideeffects could be averted, the Mexican view is that a Nicaraguan-Honduran war would be worse than anything that could be achieved by it. Even if the Nicaraguan regime could be overthrown, which surely could not be done without Cuban and perhaps Soviet intervention having first been overcome, the Sandinistas have made it clear that they would resume guerrilla warfare and perhaps foment it throughout the region.

"I do-not see a military intervention that will end the conflict in Central America," the Mexican official said. He thought it would bring instead, a period of turmoil for many years, in which the United States inevitably would be entangled. That is why the Reagan policy of initiating and supporting the Contras' military attacks on Nicaragua - Ortega said they had already caused 600 deaths this year and millions of dollars worth of damage - is seen in Mexico City as extremely dangerous.

> Overthrowing the regime would be the start of real trouble

It is hardly likely, of course, that Reagan actually wants a Nicara-guan-Honduran war, so clearly would the United States have to be heavily involved and so great are the dangers. That would not be the best campaign plan for a president who is almost certainly seeking reelection.

But since the military pressure nn Nicaragua elearly risks such a war, it is fair to ask what that policy can achieve that is worth the risk. Stopping the arms flow into El Salvador? Even if Washington had been able to produce a shred of evidence that this flow is ut substantial importance to the Salvadoran guerrillas, there should be better ways to stop it than military attacks on Nicaragua that could bring on general war.

Forcing the Sandinistas toward a more democratic or pro-United States policy? Military attacks do not seem likely to accomplish that. Overthrowing the regime? As the Mexicans see it, that would not be the end but the beginning of real trouble. So what is Reagan's goal? Where does his Nicaraguan policy lead? If he knows, now is the time to let the people decide if they want to the future of the rating system. Like most of this Government's secrets, the contents of this forthcoming document have already been profusely leaked. In this case, however, the Prime Minister has no need to intensified by the confusion that set up one of her fruitless investisurrounded our proposals. We said gations. The identity of the culprit is already exposed. He is none other But we refused to accept our Nato than Mr Jenkin himself who, within ohligations. We promised effective conventional defence. Yet we insisted that a Labour government the past week, has turned into the Lina Lamont of British politics. It will be recalled that in that cinematic masterwork Singin' in the Rain Miss Lamont, a silent movie star, delivered herself of the significant confession: "I gave an exclusive story to every paper in town". Mr Jenkin has followed that illustrious precedent.

So we know that what the Government has in mind is a system whereby a group of local authorities, selected as victims pour encourager les autres, will have their right to fix their own rate levels removed and replaced by government diktat, rubber-stamped by Parliament. This procedure, we are sternly informed, is all in the interests of control of publie expenditure.

Every government takes a close interest in local government spend-ing, and I have to say that I have come to wonder why. After all, local authority borrowing is already controlled by Whitehall. Even more subject to the Government's wishes s the rate support grant, which is distributed for the express purpose of being spent and whose level is fixed by the Secretary of State. As for rate-borne expenditure, it is of course balanced exactly by the rates levied on local taxpayers, and so adds precisely nothing in net terms to public expenditure. Rate poundages are a bargain struck between councillors and their electors, and any local authority which levies too high a rate soon finds itself in trouble at the polling booths.

What, then, is all the fuss about? Mr Jemkin has summed it up in remarkable and indeed bizarre fashion. In one of his numerous interviews he has complained that the free exercise by local authorities of their rating powers "erodes the taxable capacity of the nation. What, presumably, he means by this is that if councils retain liberty to levy their own rates they may be cheeky enough to take too much, leaving insufficient scope for government tax increases. This is an interesting revelation on the inner thought processes of a government ostensibly dedicated to the grand cause of tax reduction. This month's White Paper is to be followed by a brief period of consultation, with legislation sched-

Mr Jenkins has forecast that persistent refusal by councils to obey Whitehall's instruc-tions could lead the Department of the Environment to put commissioners into the town halls. charged with taking over completely the duties of elected authorities. No doubt Mr Jenkin intends that this dark warning will make councillors' blood run cold. They are more likely to seize on it as their potential salvation. For more than three years, under earlier legislation devised by Michael Heseltine and his successor. Mr Tom King local authorities have been required to carry out the Government's bidding by sophisticated mechanisms that created no martyrs and left the odium for service cuts and redundancies, as well as higher rates, firmly in the laps of reluctant and sullen local

That local authority expenditure nevertheless failed to conform as closely to the Government's wishes as those Secretaries of State would have liked is in fact a tribute to the civic responsibility of council leaders. Their attitude was summarized earlier this month by Mr Robert Neame, leader of Kent County Council (Conscryativecontrolled, in case anyone for a moment doubted it) in these words: We regret that Kent will be penalized, but our first duty is to ensure the provision of essential services at a cost acceptable to the rate payers."

If councillors now find that they can leave all the dirty work - and the public and political odium - to one. of Mr Jenkin's commissioners, many will leap at the chance. The Secretary of State's ultimate deterrent may turn out to be Labour councillors' deliverance. The author is Labour MP for

The idea that we have to choose between radicalism and reality, commonsense and socialism, is a view held only hy working people of this country. The Labour Party's recent tragedy has been that we have failed to translate progressive instincts into votes and seats in the House of Commons.

We did not lose the last election because our policies were too radical; we failed because we made promises that many of our potential supporters believed we could not keep. We must fight the next election on policies which make clear our determination to create a more equal society.

But the proposals we make for changing Britain must be coherent and convincing. We must make clear the way in which real equality exhances human dignity and indi-vidual freedom. We must know the cost of our programme and be prepared to explain the way in which the bills will be paid. Above all, we must avoid the contradic-tions and confusion that are often the unhappy result of the way in which our policies are determined.

The Labour Party cannot afford another long agony of so-called constitutional reform. Last month's defeat was in no small part the result of years of wrangling that we once called "democratic change" and the institutionalized conflict which it created. But we must - at first informally and then by changes in our procedures and practices - give greater power to the individual party member. If we spoke for our rank and file members we would speak for the British people. The typical Labour Party member - like the potential Labour Party voter who lives next door - wants Labour to look like a potential government, not a protest movement or pressure group, not a collection of warring factions, not a debating society or museum of exotic and extreme minority opinions. When the fortunes of the Conservatives revived that became less likely. The route to government for the Alliance seemed then to lie first through replacing Labour as the viable alternative - a realignment of the left in reverse order to what happened when Labour replaced the Liberals.

In terms of votes cast at the election, that prospect seemed to be the right one. But how does the Alliance now proceed to the next stage? It cannot scale the dwindling citadel of Labour power till the next election. Yet how does it keep up momentum in the meantime? Moreover, it came second to Labour in only 46 seats, compared to being second in 262 Conservative seats. This means that its only real hope of replacing Labour is to wait for a terminal collapse in the Labour vote far in excess of that which occurred last month. Post-election surveys show, inci-dentally, that the SDP part of the Alliance is more likely to appeal to Labour voters in all areas than the Liberals are, which suggests that, if the policy is to plan for a realignment of the left based on a continuing collapse of Labour, the formation of a formal merger with the Liberal party would be unwise. The nagging question remains, regardless of the personalities of Dr Owen and Mr Steel. Is the third force in British politics strong enough to replace the second force? Or should it stay true to its original rhetoric of breaking the mould, and work for a structure of British politics which is not at all bipolar, but multi-party? The logic of proportional representation is for many political groupings and permanent coalition governments. The logic of the realignment of the left is for a straight takcover of Labour's role as a main alternative to Conservative government in a continuing bipolar system.

The weaknesses of both posrise as a consequence of the itions are apparent. The Alliance will not be in a position to break the mould and introduce a multi-party structure of politics based on proportional represen-tation until it has already won power the conventional way in a basically bipolar system. Yet to do that it needs a cohesion and a credibility which it does not have as two groups.

Yet again, a merger, if that merely enabled the existing Liberals to absorb the SDP, would deprive the Alliance of its special appeal to still unconverted Labour loyalists, and also its hard edge of policy making particularly in economics and defence. The SDP capacity to deter the Liberal party from some of its wilder policies is greater as a separate party within an Alliance than it would be as a particular wing of a merged

The weakness of the realignment policy is that it leaves the initiative to the Labour party. Alliance politicians can only sit back and wait for Labour to do such violence to itself in its leadership contest and beyond that it continues to lose support. These possibilities will be discussed here tomorrow, but they hardly form a reassuring basis for SDP and Liberal politicians to plan a coherent strategy for the next four to five years. This explains the likely muddles which may emerge in the day to day workings of the Alliance, Informal mergers at constituency level cannot be the blueprint for a successful merger and the formation of a precise political grouping at the national level. Therein lies the risk that a merged party would simply appear to be a reconstituted Liberal party. The lesson of voting patterns since the war is that Liberal fortunes ebb during Labour governments and flow under Conservative governments, but they do not flow enough to burst through the sluice-gates of the electoral system: It may take more than a long summer for the Alliance to come up with answers to these Ideological differences continue, but they are less bitter than when Moscow was attacking Mao as a 'Hitlerite warmonger". There is rivalry for influence in "national liberation struggles" and in the non-aligned countries. Both communist giants offer their greatly differing experience in socialist development as the best pattern for others to follow.

The role of the USA is an important factor. Improved. Sino-American relations caused considerable upset in the Kremlin and provided further incentive to extend Soviet detente with the West. Yet at the same time Moscow criticized China for "lining up with the imperialists". The USSR emphasizes that unlike the USA, it fully recognizes Chinese sovereignty over Taiwan: but Peking is aware that Moscow is exploiting US-Chinese differences for its own ends. While Washingota retains a realistic assessment of Soviet l'oreign policy China has no need to fear isolation from a US-Soviet rapprochement, and can afford to show displeasure at Washington's links with Taiwan.

Unlike the istance of the many contacts the Russo-Chinese treaties. The USSR, China is not regarded as a major military threat. It has fairly good relations with the European Community and Japan, and apart from financial stringencies, has few restrictions on expanding trade.

> As Premier Zhao Ziyang pointed out recently, progress in the Sino-Soviet talks will be slight while the USSR refuses to discuss major issues such as the occupation of Afghanistan; Soviet support for Vietnam in its border conflict with China and expansionist policies in Cambodia; or the military threat to China of some fifty divisions across the border in the USSR and Mongolia. Peking is just as alarmed as Japan at the build-up of Soviet missiles in the Far East. President Andropov, like his predecessor, has talked of "normalizing" relations with China but has made no concrete proposals.

When weighed against matters of such importance, progress in other areas seems slight. The USSR has seven times more trade with the two million Mongolians in Comecon than with the thousand million Chinese. Despite increasing Chinese contacts with the USSR's East European allies, trade with West Germany alone is several times greater. Moscow Radio recently complained that a Sino-Soviet cultural agreement covers the exchange of ten students this year, while there are nine thousand Chinese students in the capitalist USA.

It would be nawise for Western leaders to depend on the Sino-Soviet dispute to tie up a large proportion of Soviet military strength; it would be even more foolish to attempt to exacerbate the differences. The Chinese leadership is sufficiently aware of the threat of Soviet expansionism; it will no doubt continue to be cautious in developing contacts with Mos-

Yel words like "spy", "agent" and "agent of influence" are flung around and the accusations are now made once again, bolstered by the innuendo that my father's suicide in 1967 was the result of MI5 questioning rather than, as his family and friends know, of his distress and mental illness after my mother's death.

It is intolerable that these leaks, innuendoes and falsehoods should continue, while the records of the secret services remain closed to historians or to the relatives of those iovolved but apparently accessible to journalists with voluble but selfinterested contacts. These events occurred a long time ago - most of them before I was born - so that I can look at them with some detachment but also with the desire to know more.

The left-wing politics of the 1930s are a proper subject for historical study and it is incooceivable that judicial or scholarly investigation of them could now endanger national security. It is also misguided to believe, as is sometimes suggested. that keeping such matters secret shields from distress the relatives and friends of those accused.

Yours faithfully. RODERICK FLOUD. 21 Savernake Road, NW3.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sir, The Prince of Wales has repeated the "common-sense" repeated the "common-sense" opinion that if the young are "given a tasig of Army discipline" report, (July 19) they are more likely to become faw abiding citizens.

When so distinguished a public speaker makes such pronouncements most of us assume that his advisors have recommend the subject advisers have researched the subject and can produce evidence. May we know on what the opinion is based? Quite recently we had evidence that the process is at least not automatic.

Presumably the Paras are a fine example of the effect of Army discipline but a sizeable group were recently found guilty of serious sexual offence against a girl of fifteen, who was openly brought into their barracks and dormitory in contravention of military security. In defence it was blandly stated that this breach was not very unusual. A few weeks later The Times reported that another group of Paras were up before the court for their part in a drunken brawl in the streets of Aldershot. Other cases have been reported from overseas. Is it not perhaps in accord with common-sense to expect riotous. drunken and sexual misbehaviour when young fellows are removed from the natural discipline of local communities, parents and the residents of streets where they are

Do ex-soldiers generally confirm the Prince's observation that their comrades were on the whole less given to theft, vandalism, violence, drunkenness, debauch, contempt of anthority, idleness, obscenity and blasphemy than civilians?

Yours faithfully, BEN VINCENT, 4 Hawthorne Road. Radlett, Hertfordshire. July 19.

EEC labour code

From Mr Nigel Kennedy

Sir. Bryan Rigby suggests (July 7) that, the Vredeling directive is damaging and misconceived. But if his support for the principles contained within the draft directive is genuine, and if he really believes that "the British industrial relations traditioo" can achieve these standards undirected by the EEC, then the directive itself should not cause him much concern. If employeeconsultation is already - or is about to be - a reality io Britain, then the directive should arrive unnoticed,

And, if this is the case, it will serve as a useful watchdog over companies which attempt to opt out of their responsibilities regarding employee information whenever they find it inconvenient. Yours faithfully,

43 Santos Road, SW18.

'Improved' bread

From Mr Justin de Blank Sir, I write to comment on the proposed alterations to the bread and flour regulations and specifically to oppose the recommendation that will permit certain chemicals to be added to wholemeal bread.

I regard this as a thoroughly bad recommendation. "Wholemeal" is a neat, clear-cut word which concisely states that the flour or meal is the result of grinding the whole (or allthe component parts) of the grain of

The justification underlying this recommendation is that the plant bakers find it difficult to bake wholemeal loaves on their plant uoless the flour is doctored with "improvers", principally to give more lift or development to the loaf. But wholemeal loaves can perfectly well be made without "improvers" and with flow from English wheat. We bake thousands of such loaves each week using only English wheat. It takes skill but it can be done.

Let others acquire these skills; it is not right to force questionable change on the public to fit round the demands of a part - admittedly a large part - of the baking trade. Yours faithfully, JUSTIN de BLANK Justin de Blank Provisions Ltd, 42 Elizabeth Street, SWI. July 13.

Matrimonial links

From Mrs Kathleen Waring Sir, Perhaps the General Synod of the Church of England would now consider changing the words of the Marriage Service to read: "till death or divorce us do part." Yours faithfully, KATHLEEN WARING. 251 Wendover House, Thurlow Street, SE17.

Seabed rights

From Mr Thomas P. Winsor Sir, Professor Denman (July 18), in making his proposal that the rights of the state to the seabed and subsoil of the UK continental shelf should be conveyed to the oil companies to secure them certain safeguards, errs in a number of important respects:

t. The UK's rights over the UK continental shelf (UKCS) are sovereign rights for the purpose of exploring and exploiting the natural resour ces of its seabed and subsoil -Article 1 of the Geneva Convention on the Continental Shelf, as enacted into UK by the Continental Shelf Act 1964. They therefore fall quite far short of the full sovereignty that we enjoy over our land territory, and the two should not be confused.

2. As most of the oil-bearing strata in the UKCS lie in the Scottish sector and the civil law of Scotland applies to it - Continental Shelf

The Prince's view Turning the screw on rate support

Sir, I was astomished to read in your main front page report of yesterday's edition (July 19) that Kent County Council might figure on some Government hit list as an "over spender". I can only presume that it represents the view of your reporter rather than a considered comment of the Secretary of State.

It is no secret that Kent's hudget for 1983/84 exceeds the expenditure target set by the Government along with another 147 local authorities in England, and indeed two-thirds of all the shire counties. What matters is the scale of individual authorities' overspending.

The Government applied a relatively mild grant penalty to authorities who overshot their target by no more than 2 per cent, no doubt in recognition of the arbitrary nature of the target. Of those shire counties where the Conservative Party has a clear majority only one exceeded target by more than 2 per cent and their total contribution to the overall excess of £771m was a mere £36m. This peccadillo pales into insignificance when set against the GLC's excess of £301m, ILEA's at £97m and £72m by the six metropolitan counties. Furthermore, if Patrick Jenkin were to be seriously suggesting that Kent would be branded as an overspender that would be a breathtaking volte-face from his widely reported remarks in the House of Commons about the "rough justice" of the expenditure targets. Those targets are fundamentally based oo what authorities have spent in the past, so that they already legitimise to a considerable exlent past high spending and turn the screw even tighter on those authorities whose previous record had been marked hy prudence and есовоту.

If local authorities are to be pronounced guilty by journalists' innuendo I can only hope that the Government will, like Parliament of Army discipline From the Leader of the Kent County last week, opt for punishment which is both civilised and appropriate. ours faithfully, R. H. B. NEAME, County Hall, Maidstone, Kent. July 20.

From Councillor J. Sanders Grose Sir. Does the inclusion of the London Borough of Richmond upon Thames in your correspondent's list of councils destined for government rate-capping (July 19) mean that councils who are real sinners are m danger of knee-capping?

Almost exactly a year ago I visited Mr Heseltine, the then Secretary of State for the Environment, to argue a special case for increasing Rich-mond's rate support grant. I did not succeed, but he was generous in his praise of financial controls and results which set an excellent example, etc, etc.

Indeed, a week ago it was confirmed to this committee that our expenditure for 1981/82 fell within the Government expenditure guidelines by 2.65 per cent. It was also reported that although the 1982/3 accounts are not finalised the Council's expenditure is almost exactly in hine with the Government's provisional effective target. Members were also informed at the same meeting that: 1, Richmond employs the lowest number of staff 1,000 of population in any London borough. 2, over the last two years overtime working has been reduced by 23.5 per cent hours. 3, rates consistently over the years have been below the average of outer Loodon boroughs. Is Mr Patrick Jenkin ulting against windmills or has someone got his Richmonds in a twist? Yours faithfully.

J SANDERS GROSE, Chairman, Policy and Resources Committee. London Borough of Richmond upon Thames, Members' Room Municipal Offices, Twickenham. Middlesex.

Sentenced for life

From Mr Ewen E. S. Montagu, QC Sir, Not many people have seen a man who is serving a life-sentence which he believes to be definitely for the whole of the remainder of his life. I have had that awful and unforgettable experience - it was horrifying beyond the imagination of anyone who had not seen it.

It occurred at the naval court-martial of a young sailor charged with having acted as a stool-pigeon while a prisoocr of the Germans. The prosecutor called as a witness a young Canadian who had been convicted of giving aid to the Germans and who believed that his life-sentence meant for the whole of the rest of his hie and that having regard to prevailing public opinion, he could never hope to be released. One saw a creature (it was July 18.

Scottish salmon stocks From Sir Andrew Gilchrist

Sir. On July 20 and 21, 1982, you were good enough to publish two articles by me on the very scrious decline of salmon-fishing in Scotland,

Your readers may care to know that the general situation this year is no better and may even be worse. Many people are relying on a repeat performance of the heavy autumn run of grilse which occurred in many rivers last year, but there is little real hope in this direction.

Such a concentration of productive angling in a hrief season is unlikely to ensure the continuance of a sport which is not merely enjoyable but economically significant for regions lacking in modern forms of development. A season four weeks long (in pursuit of salmon in what is basically a small and immature form) will oot creator. We do not own the continental shelf, and we do not own the resources in it until they are brought out and saved. All we have is the exclusive right to explore for and exploit those resources. The conveyance to the oil companies would therefore have to be (a) of the Crown's rights, and not of the shelf of the resources in it, and (b) according to the law of Scotland The petroleum production licence already does this.

very long sentences for brutal murders - or indeed for any brutal violence, even if the Almighty decreed that the victim should not actually die, but everyone should think deeply before advocating what I feel to be the ultimate in cruelty - a sentence which will, by statute, inevitably go oo and on with no hope of any relief in this life. It may be that some prisoners could, in the event, never be released, but to enact that they should have no hope would be inhuman.

Impediments of prisoners' rights

From the Chairman of the Howard League for Penal Reform Sir. In roundly condemning penal reformers you assert that there is no such thing as prisoners' nights, but only a limited obligation on the part of penal administrators to apply minimum standards of accommodation and administrators. darion and discipline ("Just de-serts", July 15), You are wrong on two counts. First, the House of Lords has held that a prisoner retains all the rights of the enizen, except those that are specifically taken away by statute.

Raymond v Honey [1983] AC1.

Neither the Prison Act 1952 nor the Prison Rules 1964 (as amended) has authorised, for example, any impair ment of the prisoner's rights of 7 unimpeded access to the courts for a ... remedy against the prison administ-

Second, prison administrators have for some time now acknow-tedged that the rehabilitative ideology (an outmoded concept of modern penal systems) has been replaced not by retribution but by -1 justice model which pays regard to fair and equal treatment for all convicted prisoners, without discrimination. ("Humane contain-ment" is the contemporary Prison Department philosophy.) Nothing conduces more to dis-'45 turbance of the prisoo scene than the "" declared policy of imposing on " prisoners - particularly the more disruptive prisoner - a loss of a identity in conditions of intolerable overcrowding and with a denial of basic rights of maintained contact with families and friends.

Rainbow warriors

From Mr Yehudi Menuhin Sir, Greenpeace, in its intrepid ... confrontation with the greed of our fellow meo, most recently in the USSR, has demonstrated with courage and valour how to build a betler world; bow to emancipate :: mankind through responsibility to ... others, not necessarily of ones own clan or species, and to the uses of freedom. May their inspiring idealism turn our wrath against the real threats to mankind. They have identified them: those who pass unchallenged, and without respect towards our fellow creatures on this planet human, aoimal and vegetable - to wreck our world with their blind greed.

Musical manners

From Mr Gerald Harvey

Sir, Mr Ponsonhy's assurance (July 12) that messrs Boulez and Messiaen are really nice, sensitive chaps may be true but it doesn't make their music sound any less dreadful. As for his constant lament of "get to know it and you will learn to like it," I have been trying that for 30 years and it doesn't work, at least only for a very limited number of pieces, and one finds ones ears assaulted without just cause all too often.

The BBC and Mr Ponsonby have a tremendous opportunity in this respect. They have the higgest music machine ever huilt. No other art form is fed into our very homes as relentlessly as music - not even film. Yet there is little attempt to open our hearts to modern music. In fact, as an educator, Radio 3 is virtually a non-starter. Music Weekly is a jewelled island in a dead sea.

Nothing is offered to continue the fascinating tradition of Anthony Hopkios. The recent television films of Respighi were all the more beautiful for the rarity of the genre. The general presentation of modern music is bland and formal, with no attempt in the Radio Times to suggest that it might be interesting or special, and with no more than the driest of formal analyses of the works, impersonally read by an unconvinced announcer and justly forgotten as soon as the noise starts. Can Mr Ponsonby turn Radio 3 into something alive, a presentation of what is alive, beautiful and necessary to our lives in the musical field? Can he try to show us just what it is that he finds so fascinaling about this stuff? Yours sincerely, GERALD HARVEY. 8 Briarwood Road, Clapham Park, SW4.

In 1917 he married Winifred Spear of Bath. setting up a fruitful partnership which lasted 64 years until her death in 1981. After studying medicine he joined the RAMC as a Captain in the First World War, was mentioned in dis-patches, made OBE and awarded the Serbian Red Cross Medal.

In 1920 Chesterman and his wife were accepted for service with the Baptist Missionary Society and went to Yakusu in the Belgian Congo where he enlarged and improved the hospital, trained the natives in simple medicine and set out to eradicate the main scourge of the region - sleeping sickness. After years of back-breaking activity he accomplished this huge task, carning the lasting gratitude not only of local sufferers hut of the King of the Belgians. His wife, a trained leacher of great personal mag-netism, set up a school which was the envy of neighbouring mission stations. There was only one qualification for entry:
"You must be able to walk".

In 1936 Chesterman returned to London and was appointed Medical Secretary of the Baptist Missionary Society, a post he held for 12 years. His energy and good judgment helped the society's work all over the world, and he travelled widely. For nearly 50 years the Chestermans home in Hampstead was a Mecca for missionaries past, present and future, who never failed to receive generous hospitality, good advice and practical help. A lifelong friend of Albert

Schweitzer, he drove the famous doctor to Buckingham Palace to receive his OM, and was until his death president of the organization set up to support Schweitzer's hospital at Lambarene in the Gabon. to 1974 he was knighted for services to medical missions. While in practice in Harley Street he was for some years Physician to the Royal Academy of Music, a post he much enjoyed, and which earned him an Honorary FRAM. He published a number of books. including A Tropical Dispensary Handbook which was for decades compulsory reading for doctors working in the tropics.

A firm believer in the family concept, he kept in regular touch with the remotest mem-bers of the large Chesterman clan, and was the first person to be approached in time of Irouhle. A keen golfer, he played until he was 86, and watching golf on television was one of his lasi pleasures. A disappointed cry of "He's missed a four-foot putt!" would sometimes disturb the peace of his elderly colleagues at the home in Bushey Heath where he ended his days. He is survived by two sons and two daughters.

MR PATRICK SWIFT

Patrick Swift, who died at his among its "discoveries" were C home in Algarve, Portugal, on July 19 at the age of 56, was a painter of rare genius, recognized by his peers though littleknown to the general public because of his distrust of celebrity and dislike of exhibiting his work.

He was born in Dublin in 1927 and studied at the Dublin School of Fine Arts, where he won a travelling scholarship which enabled him to live and work in Italy and France, But in the 1950s he settled in London, and was a well-known figure among the artists and poets who used to foregather in the Soho pubs - among them John Minton, Francis Bacon, Lucian George Barker and Freud, Patrick Kavanagh.

In 1959 he founded and edited, together with the poet David Wright, the quarterly magazine X which in its short. life made considerable impact. Under the pseudonym of James Hahon, Swift brilliantly attacked the current vogue for abstract painting which, as he pointed out, was the official art of the day. He brought forward in the pages of λ a number of young figurative painters now well-known, including Michael Andrewes. Frank Auerbach, of Swift's painlings was held. Timothy Behrens, and Craigie Aitchison, as well as reviving interest in the work of the of trees or portraits - he forgotten David Bomberg.
On the literary side, in which Swift was also active, the magazine championed the work of then-neglected poets like

He married in 1962 Oonach Stevie Smith, Patrick Kava-nagh, and Hugh MacDiarmid; Ihree daughters and a grandson.

PROFESSOR FRANK SUTCLIFFE

Professor Frank Sutcliffe, onwards and most notably as who died on July 16, aged 64, had been associated with the University of Manchester since he entered the French Department as a student in 1937.

He was born on August 8, 1918, the son of C. E. T. Sutcliffe, and educated at Huddersfield College and Manchester University.

After war service with the Royal Artiliery at home and in the Far East he was appointed to the staff of the French Department hy his great master, Professor Eugene Vinaver. In 1961 Sutcliffe was appointed to

Sutcliffe was a reserved man who never sought the limelight or superficial popularity. He was intensely loyal to his. university and to the Faculty of. Arts which he served as Dean in-1972-74. That loyalty was well demonstrated in 1982 when in response to the financial problems of his University he volunteered for early retire-ment. All who knew him will be greatly saddened that he was given so short a time to enjoy. that retirement. He married in 1966 Jane:

MAJOR FREDERICK BRABY

MC, who was well known in the world of engineering and industrial organization, and also for his practice an support of the principal of profit sharing and co-partnership in industry, died on July 15 at the age of 86. He was Master of the Carpenter's Company in 1968-69. Frederick Cyrus (Eric) Braby was born at Sutton, Surrey, on May 1, 1897, and was educated at Charterhouse and at Manchester University with an engineering career in miod. His education and training were, bowever, interrupted by the outbreak of the 1914-1918 war. and a year after hostilities began, he joined at the age of 17. The Lancashire Fusiliers with which he served until the end of the fighting, reaching the rank of captain. He was wounded, mentioned in dispatches and awarded the MC in 1918. From 1922 to 1924 he served

Major Frederick Braby, CBE, and over the years served the firm as chairman and managing director.

He was a man of great imagination and initiative, and in the course of the years the undertaking which he had begun 10 develop as a young man turned to the manufacture of devices and gadgets, especially from non-ferrous meials.

He played an important part in the affairs of engineering organizations and for much of his active industrial and commercial life had been connected with the Industrial Co-Partnership Association. He was a Deputy Lieulenaot for the county of Keni.

He married in 1931 Margaret Isabel, daughter of the late F. H. Marshall. His wife died in 1975.

Science report Hazards of dating a dinosaur

By Pearce Wright, Science Editor

How accurate are calculations of How accurate are calculations of geologists on the age of a dinesaor, such as the carnivorous beast just discovered in Surrey which has provoked such intense excitement. There are even more difficult questions for palaeontologists. For instance: did dinesaurs become extinct at the same time in Europe and North America and did their demise coincide with the extinction of, say, other marine creatures?

dbninisking returns for their But Professor Cox and bis co-authors were equally certain that higher tevels of precision were possible because the present time scales were so oneven and, more importantly, the new version would be highy valuable, particularly for petroleum geologists. Scientists use such a time scale as they work in establish the order of events all over the world long before human history began. They gather clues from rocks about what the world was like when the rocks were forming. As untural his-torians, they also need to know precisely when rocks formed.

The new timetable has been assembled from data gathered from several disciplines of scientific research. It is presented as a multicoloured wallchart that plots the decades of geological research on four different time scales, but they are set in parallel. A 100-page text accompanies the chart.
One scale represents the oldest and most common type of dating fossils. The time periods, most of which were originally dated by the fossils they contain, are usued and ordered in a column. On this scale, homao history fits into the up few millimetres. Familiar names such as Pleistoramiliar names such as Pleisto-cene and Mesozolc appear among the 100 or so eras, epochs, periods and ages. Other scales are measurements of dates by radioactivity levels in rocks and by the patterns of magnetism.

Petroleum geologists hunting for oil should have a special interest in the timerable. They need to know the timing of two geological events first, the burying of myriad marine organisms whose bodies have turned into oil, and second, the time of the bending of rock layers to form pockets that will trap oil as it rises towards the wind the out as a rises towards the surface. This sequence is so important that many big oil companies write their own timescales.

Third World 'faces catastrophe' if economic recovery tapers off

Developing countries face catastrophic consequences" if the industrial countries' economic recovery tapers off into a decade of slow growth, the World Bank says in its World Development Report 1983.

The report, published today, also says that sustained and reasonably fast economic growth in the rich countries will not be sufficient by itself to generate adequate living standards in poor countries. Much more aid, private capital investment and better economic management by the govern-ments and enterprises of developing countries are equally important. Yet if the rich countries do not solve their structural problems and the developing countries achieve low growth, the report says "it is easy to envisage a downward global economic spiral emerging with catastrophic consequences for the developing countries. The bank's economists believe that despite the heavy debts of the Third World, commercial banks are not

Banker in Asian loans affair killed

Malaysian banker in Hongkong last week has added a fresh twist. to the government-owned Bank Bumiputra's attempts to re-cover more than HK$1,000m (£90.9m) in loans to Carrian Investments, EDA Investments and the companies controlled by Mr Kevin Hsu.

assistant general manager of Bumiputra Malaysia Finance (BMF), the bank's Hongkong subsidiary, cashed a HK$50,000 (£4,545) cheque and left the office last Monday to meet someone. His body was found in a banana plantation late the next day. Apparently he had been tortured. Even the most astute bankers have yet to find out who the shareholders of Carrian Holdings are, all of whom are said to be hiding behind Liberian, Panamanian and Swiss nomi-nee companies. There have been suggestions that they are fronting for Malaysian politicians and businessmen, but this has never been proved.

The problems of BMF an ted a confidential report on the bank's position to Datuk Seri Or Mahathir Mohamad, the Prime Minister. One senior official insists that BMF's position in Hongkong is much better than had been reported. But it would be another year before that statement could be proved or disproved.

Some sources say that Mr Kevin Hsu is trying to restructure his loans.

Carrian investments, the quoted subsidiary of Carrian Holdings, under Mr George Tan, a Malaysian engineer who is a former bankrupt, became the high flier in the Hongkong property market. Bankers were falling over each other to lend it money for little or no security.

BMF was one of nearly 100 banks and finance companies that had lent money to these three companies.

While the press here and in Hongkong has sharpened its atacks on Bank Bumiputra for its loan policies, the bank officials themselves seem certin that the losses are not as high as had been reported. The bank had moved against EDA Ivest-ments and its chairman, Mr C M Chung; who has disappeared from the colony and is believed to be in Taiwan.

Breathing space for US

Britain and America are making determined efforts to heal their transatiantic rifts. But are the gaps really being plugged? Or is a dipolomatic wallpaper being pasted over them?

Meanwhile, decisions are being made which will have a far greater impact on Anglo-American relations.

When the US Export Administration Act is renewed this antumn, it will run for five years. Mr William Nieholas, director of the London chamber of commerce, who this month pnt British industry's case to the US Congress, says that British companies have already warned him that they do not want to be tied in to American supplies of goods and technologies.

Concessions made to Europe in the new Act, they insist, will be in too small print to matter

British Shipbuilders By Our Industrial Correspondent

The Government is this week expected to give the go-shead for freeports in Britain. The Institute of Directors, £100m which was represented on the Sir Robert Atkinson, chair-Treasury working party that reported to then Chancellor Sir Geoffrey Howe, last year, said on Friday that it expected a "massive" number of applications to be made for the right to establish freeports. These are widely used abroad, particularly in the United States. They allow manufactuers to set up plants within strictly controlled zones and to process imported goods without having to pay customs and excise duties.

The duries are then applied only to those products which come into the United kingdom market, giving firms a considerable cost benefit.

There were fears that the proposal had been lost because of the general election. But the Institute of Directors said that next week's criteria for freeports will probably contain a deadline of October for applications.

The proposal could then become part of next year's Finance Bill, and some freeports could be in operation by the middle of next year.

The Government is known to favour the establishment of two or three experimental zones. Probably candidates to join Rotterdam. Europe's known freeport, include Felistowe, Belfast, Manchester Ringway and Prestwick airports. Most are likely to be located at coastal ports.

VAT net spreads to fairs abroad

The Customs and Excise department has decided to spread its value-added tax net on to the British organizers of overseas trade fairs and companies taking part in them.

On numerous occasions, it pays the round-trip freight costs for machinery being put on display, which can easily run into several thousands of pounds per item.

Demand has increased to record proportions this year, with the number of subventions certain to top 8,000. However, the FPB does not subsidize all trade fairs staged worldwide, especially first-time events, so the total number of exhibitors affected by the VAT decision is considerably larger.

What could alarm exporters is a decision to apply VAT retrospectively. Trade fairs organizers are faced with the cumbersome task of claiming make no comment on the an extra 15 per cent from the

Objectives of the Fund

The Fund was incorporated with limited liability on 14 July 1983 under the provisions of the Companies Law, Cap. 22 as amended of the Cayman Islands. It will operate in a similar way to a unit trust io that each week it may issue and redeem Participating Shares at prices based oo the Fund's underlying net asset value. The Fund's share capital is described in Appendix A. This prospectus relates to the initial offer of 25,000,000 Participating Shares in the Fund at US

$10 per Participating Share.

The Fund aims to provide investors with a professionally managed portfolio of fixed interest securities and securities issued at a discount in the international capital markets, denominated in US dollars, deutschmarks, Dutch guilders, pounds sterling, Swiss francs, French francs, Japanese yeo, Canadian dollars and Norwegian krone.

It is in the nature of bond investment that a large part of the return generally arises as income. But the Directors believe that there are significant investment opportunities io purchasing deep discount bonds and ootes where substantial capital gains (including the discount) may arise. Accordingly, the Fund may include a large proportion of deep discount bonds and ootes in its portfolio, thus giving rise to capital gains (including discounts) rather than income. In current coordinates it is expected that the Fund's portfolio would earn an income yield of approximately 5 per cent per annum.

A large proportion of the boods in the Fund's portfolio is likely to consist of eurocurrency instruments together with bonds issued in those countries where oo tax is withheld at source on interest and zero or low coupon bonds. It will be the Directors', intention to concentrate the portfolio oo prime quality issues, in order to maintain a high degree of marketability. The Fund will make a reasonable spread of investments and its Articles of Association contain certaio restrictions oo the Fuod's investment policy, including a provisioo that, at the time of acquisitioo, the value of the Fund's interest in any investment shall not exceed 15 per cent. of the value of the Fund's total investments; further details of the restrictions will be found in paragraph 15 of Appendix D.

Those of the Fund's assets oot committed to the looger term markets may be held either as cash on deposit, iovested in short-term negotiable securities such as certificates of deposit, bank acceptances and treasury hills, or invested in floating rate instruments on which the rate of interest is periodically reviewed. The Directors will seek to protect the capital value of the Fund by shortening the average maturity of the investments in periods of rising interest rates. Therefore, the proportion of the assets of the Fund held in cash and short-term instruments may be coosiderable and may vary from time to time according to the Directors' views of the likely movements in interest rates.

The anticipated movement of foreign exchange values is an important part of investment decisions both in selecting loog-term securities and io choosing currencies in which to hold funds. However, active dealiogs in the foreign exchange markets are not contemplated.

Participating Income Shares and Participating Accumulation Shares

The Participating Shares offered for subscription are available to be issued as Participating Income Shares or as Participating Accumulation Shares. The two classes carry the same rights except in the following respects. The Participating Income Shares carry a right to dividends. The Participating Accumulation Shares carry no right to dividends. Instead, they carry a right to an increased share in the underlying assets of the Fund.

On each Valuation Day a calculation is carried out to determine the proportion of the Fund's assets attributable to the Participating Income Shares and the Participating Accumulation Shares, taking into account any dividends paid to the holders of the Participating Income Shares and alterations in the numbers of shares in issue of each class. This apportionment then forms the basis for calculating the subscription and redemption prices of the two classes of shares and their respective rights to surplus assets on a winding-up. LSJ will make no initial charge to investors in respect of Participation Shares to be allotted on 8 August 1983 but on subsequent issues it may retain for its own benefit an initial charge of up to three per cent, of the subscription price of the Participating Shares plus the amount necessary to round up the subscription price of each Participating Share to the nearest whole

In secondary market transactions members of the Lazard Brothers & Co., Limited group ("the Lazard group") will make no charges, commission or dealing profit on transactions with the Fund. Where any member of the Lazard group participates in the underwriting and/or placement of new issues of securities and subsequently such securities are sold to the Fund by any member of the Lazard group, any placement discounts earned in respect of the placement of the issue will generally be passed on to the Fund, bot any underwriting fees will generally be retained by the relevant member of the Lazard group.

The investment adviser, Lazard Securities Limited, will receive fees. Those will oot be borne by the Fund but will be paid by LSJ out of its own fees.

ATB will receive from the Fund a quarterly fee of a one thirty-second part of one per cent. of the average of the values of the net assets of the Fund (calculated as in the case of LSJ's fee). This fee will be reduced, on a sliding scale, where the average of the net asset values of the Fund exceeds US $40 million. On the first US $10 million in excess of US $40 million, the percentage calculation of ATB's quarterly fee will be reduced by one-half (to a one sixty-fourth part of one per cent.). On the next US $10 million of any excess the percentage calculation will be further reduced to a one noe-bundred-and-twenty-eighth part of one per cent. On any excess over US $60 million the percentage calculation of ATB's fee will be reduced to a percentage calculation of ATB's fee will be reduced to a one two-bundred-and-fifty-sixth part of one per cent.

in respect of its services as custodian MGT will receive from the Fund 2 quarterly fee of 2 one thirty-second part of one per cent, of the average of the values of the net assets of the Fund (calculated as to the case of LS)'s fee). This fee will be reduced on a sliding scale where the werage of the net asset values exceeds US $40 million (in the same manner as ATB's fee). MGT will meet any expenses or fees of its sub-custodians, nominees and agents, including Lazard Bruthers & Co., Limited, out of its remuneration.

The Fund will be responsible for certain expenses as specified in the registrar and secretarial, custodian and management agreements such as audit fees, stamp and other duties and charges incurred on the acquisition and realisation of investments. In addition, the Fund will pay its termation expenses and all expenses in connection with the initial issue of Participating Si and the obtaining of the listing of the Participating Shares on The Stock Exchange (other than those specified in paragraph 2 of Appendix D) these expenses being amortised over a period of five years from the dates on which they were incurred. LSI, ATB and MGT will meet all other expenses incurred by them in connection with their services.

Application has been made to the Governor-in-Council of the Cayman Islands for an indertaking that the Fund will not be chargeable to tax in the Cayman Islands on its income or its tapital gains arising in the Cayman Islands or elsewhere for a period of twenty years. Dividends of the Fund will be payable without deduction of tax in shareholders resident in or outside the Cayman Islands. No stamp duty is levied in the Cayman Islands on the transfer or redemption of Participating Shares in the Fund. The only tax which will be chargeable on the Fund in the Cayman Islands is an annual charge calculated on the nominal amount of the authorised share capital of the Fund which, at current rates, will not exceed approximately US

It is intended that the Fund will not be resident in the United Kingdom for taxation purposes. The Jersey Comptroller of income Tax has confirmed that he is satisfied that the proposed manner of management and commol of the Fund, and the performance by LSJ of its duties under the management agreement, are such that the Fund will not be or become liable to-tax

The investments of the Fund will be made in such a way as to seek to minimise tax of other countries deductible at source or withheld from any income or capital receipts of the Fund on

Investors in the United Kingdom

Holders of Participating Shares who are resident in the United Kingdom for tax purposes will, depending on their individual circumstances, be liable to United Kingdom income tax or corporation tax on dividends paid by the Fund. Holders (other than those holding shares as dealing stock who are subject to different rules), who are resident or ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom, may be liable to United Kingdom capital gains tax or corporation tax in respect of gains arising from the disposal or redemption of Participating Shares.

Clearance under section 464 of the Jacome and Corporation Taxes Act 1970 (cancellation of tix advantages from certain transactions in securities) has been given by the United Kingdom Board of Inland Revenue in relation to (inter alia);

a. the issue of the Unclassified Shares of the Fund as Participating Shares or as Nominal Shares:

the subsequent redemption by the Fund of Participating Shares and Nominal Shares. The attention of individuals ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom is drawn to section 478 of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1970, as amended, and to section 45 of the Finance Act 1981 which may, in certain circumstances, render them liable to United Kingdom income tax in respect of income of the Fund.

The first United Kingdom Finance Bill of 1983 (as originally introduced) contained provisions concerning the taxation of international business. The present government has indicated that those provisions will not be introduced before 1984. If provisions of the same or similar nature eventually become law, companies resident for tax purposes in the United Kingdom having a sufficient interest in the Fund could in certain circumstances be chargeable to United Kingdom corporation tax in respect of the Fund's income.

Investors in Jersey The attention of Jersey residents is drawn to Article 134A of the Income Tax (Jersey) Law. 1961, which may render a shareholder so resident liable to income tax on undistributed income and profits of the Fund. The Fund has undertaken to deduct Jersey income tax at source from any dividends paid to Jersey residents and to account for such tax to the Comptroller of Income Tax in Jersey.

The foregoing is based on the law and practice currently in force in the Cayman Islands, the United Kingdom and Jersey, and is subject to changes therein. However, investors in any jurisdiction should consult their professional advisers on the possible tax, exchange control or other consequences of buying; holding, selling or redeeming Participating Shares under the laws of their country of citizenship, residence or domicile.

Redemption of Participating Shares

Participating Shares may, except where there is a suspension of the valuation of assets (see below), be redeemed on any Subscription Day at the redemption price. LSJ may elect to purchase at a price not less than the redemption price any Participating Shares presented for redemption. The redemption price per Participating Share is determined in accordance with the Articles of Association. In summary, it is determined by assessing the value of the net assets of the Fund on the relevant Valuation Day, deducting the paid-up capital on Nominal and Management Shares in issue and a provision for duties and charges payable on a deemed realisation of the whole of the Fund's portfolio, ascertaining the proportion of that amount that is attributable to each class of Participating Share, and dividing the amount of the respective proportions so ascertained by the total number of Participating Shares of the relevant class in issue and deemed to be in issue. The resulting figure is adjusted downwards to the nearest whole cent (the amount necessary to effect such downward adjustment being payable to LSJ for its absolute use and benefit).

To redeem all or part of his bolding, a shareholder should complete the form on the back of each share certificate and send the certificate to LSJ. In order to qualify for redemption on a particular Subscription Day, instructions should be received not later than 3.30 pm on the immediately preceding business day. Requests for redemption received late may be beld over until the next Subscription Day.

Reconests for redemption once made may be withdrawn only in the event of a suspension of the valuation of the Fund's assets.

Any amount payable to a shareholder in connection with requests for redemption will be paid by dollar cheque and will be posted to the shareholder (or for amounts in excess of US $20,000 cabled or telexed to a bank at the shareholder's request and expense) within five business days after the later of the date on which the redemption (or purchase) takes effect and the date of receipt of a duly endorsed certificate for the Shares to be redeemed or purchased.

The Fund shall not be bound to redeem on any one Subscription Day more than one-eighth of the total number of Participating Shares then in issue.

If at any time after the fifth anniversary of the incorporation of the Fund the value of the Fund's net assets shall, on each Subscription Day within a period of 26 consecutive weeks, be less than US $1,000,000 the Fund may redeem all the Participating Shares then in issue at the ruling redemption price.

Accounts and Reports

The Fund's first financial period will end on the last Valuation Day in July 1984. Subsequent financial periods will end on the last Valuation Day in July of each succeeding year. Copies of the audited accounts of the Fund for a financial period will be sent to shareholders at their registered address normally during the following September. Shareholders will also be sent half-yearly reports relating to the Fund normally during March in each year.

Subscription and Valuation Days

Subscription Days will normally be every Wednesday, or if that day is not a business day the next following business day, or such other day as may from time to time be determined by the Directors. The first Subscription Day after the initial issue of Participating Shares will be 10

After the initial issue, the oet assets of the Fund will be valued oo each Valuation Day which will normally be the business day immediately preceding the day before each Subscription Day. However, the Directors may suspend valuation if, in their opinion, it is not reasonably practicable for the Fund to dispose of investments or fairly to determine the value of net assets, or if a breakdown occurs in any of the means normally employed to ascertain such value.

The Articles of Association provide that eurobonds are generally to be valued at prices quoted at noon on the day before the relevant Valuation Day in the over-the-counter market in London, and quoted securities generally at closing market prices on the day before the relevant Valuation Day. The market value of treasury bills, bank acceptances, trade bills and certificates of deposit will be determined at noon on the relevant Valuation Day. Other unquoted investments will be valued at Directors' valuation, including any discount which the Directors think appropriate to reflect their true current value, All valuations of interestbearing assets will include interest accruing up to the Valuation Day in question.

Underlying Companies

The Articles of Association of the Fund allow it to bold investments through the medium of one or more companies, trusts or other legal entities (termed "underlying companies") which would be wholly owned by the Fund. The Directors of the Fund may establish such an underlying company for the purpose of holding all or part of the investments of the Fund if they consider this to be in the interests of shareholders. For the purpose of determining the value of the net assets of the Fund, the Fund and any underlying company will be valued on a consolidated basis.

Publication of Prices of Participating Shares

The quotations for Participating Shares on The Stock Exchange will appear in The Stock Exchange Daily Official List. The manager will also arrange for the Financial Times to publish daily in the "Offshore and Overseas Funds" section the prices for the Participating Shares.

erecta Shares Management Shares have been created in order that Participating Shares may be issued. (Under the laws of the Cayman Islands, the Participating Shares, to be redeemable, have to be preference shares. In order to be preference shares, the Participating Shares treat have a preference over some other class of share capital.) The Management Shares each exary one voice on a poll, do not extry any right to dividends and, in a winding-up, rank only for a return of paid op capital (after the return of nominal capital paid up on Participating Shares and Nominal Shares).

France and the Country of the Point to dividends declared by the Fund in general meeting or resolved in be paid by the Directors. The Participating Accumulation Shares carry no right in dividends. Instead they have a right to increased share in the assets of the Fund. Under the Articles of Association of the Fund the proportion of the act assets of the Fund that is artificiable to the Participating Income Shares in aggregate and to the Participating Accumulation Shares in aggregate is determined as

1 Each Participating Income Share is created as representing one undivided share in the Fund's net assets.

2 Each Participating Accumulation Share comprised in the initial issue of Participating Accumulation Shares is treated, upon issue, as one undivided share in the Fund's nes assets. 3 Each Participating Accumulation Share issued after the initial issue of Participating Accumulation Shares is treated as representing, upon issue, the same number (including fractions) of undivided shares in the Pand's net assets as each Participating Accumulation Share then in issue.

A On each occasion when Participating Accumulation Shares are in issue or deemed to be in issue and a dividend is declared in respect of the Participating Income Shares, the number (including fractions) of undivided shares in the Fund's act assets represented by each Participating Accumulation Share is treated as increased to such extent (as nearly as may be without involving a fraction smaller than one ten-thousandth part of an undivided share) that the minimum price at which a Participating Accumulation Share may be issued (which is based on the value of the next assets of the fund) shall remain unchanged, notwithstanding the declaration of the dividend in respect of the Participating Income Shares which reduces the value of the Fund's net assets.

5 The proportion of the Fund's act assets artriburable to the aggregate of either Participating Income Shares or Participating Accomplisation Shares is the proportion of the net assets of the Fund as the total number of undivided shares represented by the Participating Shares of the particular class in question bears to the total number of undivided shares represented by all Participating Shares.

Fach holder of Participating Shares will be untitled, on a poll, to one vote for each Participating Share held. In a winding-up, each Participating Share carries a right to a return of the nominal capital paid up by respect of such share in priority to the repayment of the nominal amounts paid up on Nominal and Management Shares. After the return of the nominal capital paid up on Nominal and Management Shares any surplus assets will be apportioned between the Participating Income Shares and Participating Accumulation Shares according to their respective interests in the net assets.

All Participating Shares not previously redeemed will be redeemed by the Fund on 31 December 2002 or if that day is not a business day on the next following business day, at the redeemption price on the day in question.

LSJ as manager is empowered under the Articles of Association to require the transfer or redemption of any Participating Share which is owned directly or beneficially by any person in breach of any law or requirement of any country or government authority by wirtor of which such person is not qualified to hold such Participating Share.

country or government authority by virtue of which such person is not qualified to hold such Participating Shares. Further Issue of Participating Shares. The Articles of Association provide that, after the initial issue of Participating Shares, and except when there be a suspension of the valuation of the Fund's assets, further Participating Shares of each class may be issued on Subscription Days at a price per Participating Share of not less than that determined by assessing the value of the Fund's net assets on the relevant Valuation Day, deducting the paid up capital on the Nominal and Management Shares in issue, adding a provision for duties and charges payable on a deemed acquisition of the whole of the Fund's portfolio, ascertaining the proportion of their amount attributable to each class of Participating Share, and dividing the amount of the respective proportions so ascertained by the total number of Participating Shares of the relevant class in issue and deemed in he in issue. The price per Participating Share so calculated may then be increased by a manager's fee of an amount not exceeding three per cent. of such price plus the amount necessary in tound op the resulting sum to the nearest whole cent.

Nominal Shares

The Nominal Shares can only be issued at par and only for the purpose of providing funds for the repayment of the nominal amount of Participating Shares redeemed. They will be issued only to LSI as the manager. They carry on right to dividends, In a winding-up, they carry the right to repayment of nominal capital paid up in priority in repayment of nominal capital paid up on the Management Shares. Each holder of Nominal Shares b entitled, on a poll, in one vote in respect of all the Nominal Shares held by him.

LSJ is obliged to subscribe for Nominal Shares for cash at par when Participating Shares are redeemed, unless the Directors decide thet the nominal amount of such Participating Shares is in he redeemed out of profits. Nominal Shares may, at the option of LSJ and by payment of the appropriate sum to the Fund, he converted into Participating Shares of either class for sale to investors.

Variations of Rights

The rights attached to any class of shares may, subject to the laws of the Caymao Islands or unless otherwise provided by the terms of issue of the shares of that class, he varied or abrogated with the consent in writing of the holders of the terms of its issue of the shares of that class or with the sanction of a resolution passed at a separate meeting of the holders of the shares of the class by a majority of three-quarters of the votes cast at that meeting. For these purposes, the Directors may treat all the classes of Participating Shares as forming one class if they consider that all such classes would be affected in the same way by the proposals under consideration but in every other case each class of Participating Shares shall be treated as a separate class. The rights attached to the Participating Shares are deemed to be varied by any variation of the rights attached to shares of any other class or by the creation or issue of any shares other than Participating Shares tranking part passa with them as respects divide ad rights and rights in a winding-up and on a reduction of capital. Safeguarding the interests of shareholders

The Fund has given to the manager power in certain circumstances to instruct the custodian to cease to hold the Fund's assets to the Fund's order and instead to hold those assets on trust (broadly) to discharge all liabilities of the Fund to creditors and to distribute any surplus remaining to shareholders on terms similar to the rights of shareholders under the Articles of Association of the Fund. This procedure is designed to safeguard the interests of shareholders under the Articles of Association of the Fund. This procedure is designed to to be desirable for any reason to safeguard those interests. The intention is that, on instructions being given by the manager to the custodian, shareholders 'nights in the Fund would be valueless but shareholders would become beneficiaries under the trust to distribute the assets held by the custodian. As an alternative to the distribution of the assets of the Fund by the custodian, provision has been made to allow those assets to be transferred by the custodian to a new company in exchange for an issue of shares in that new company to shareholders of the Fund. This alternative may be implemented only with the sanction of a resolution passed at a meeting summoned at the discretion of the custodian by a majority of 75 per cent. of the shareholders present in person or by proxy.

Inflation floodgates ajar

While White House officials congratulated themselves on the speed of economic recovery during the second quarter, they are bound to be giving some thought to the question: Can we skate through 1984 without a big financial crisis?

Time and again, the Admin-istration and the Federal Reserve have been warned that the wildly expansionary policy of the Federal Reserve since the middle of last year could lead to a much stronger recovery than the Administration of private economists expected; or a rise in interest rates back to crisis levels; or a crisis of monetary policy.

Two events last week made the last two of these predicitions more likely to take place. First, the decision by the Federal Reserve to make the second quarter of this year the new base, from which further growth in M1 will be measured and on which the 5-9 per cent target growth for M1 will be measured.

Secondly, the extraordinary 8.7 per cent annual growth rate of real GNP in the second quarter and, the even more extraordinary, 10 per cent annual growth of personal consumption in that period.

The United States economy is on a path of unsustainable economic growth.

Another factor is the fear of an early return of inflation which would stimulate increases in interest rates. On Thursday Mr Martin Feldstein echoed widespread expectations when he said it was likely that the prime rate would have to rise very soon. Until last week, there was room for hope that the inevitable change would nottake place until 1985.

At a certain point public psycology may also change. It will change from a perception of economic hardship and risk of losing one's job to a perception of rising prosperity and inflation

To date, the "revolt of the financial markets" - expressed in the continuing high level of real intrest rates in the United States - has kept the dollar strong, the gold price down and put the lid on commidity prices.

Sentencing problem after change in law

Regina v Ardani Before Lord Lane, Lord Chief Justice, Mr Justice Bingham and Mr

[Judgment delivered July 22] A lactina in the statutory transitional provisions governing sentences on young offenders was considered by the Court of Appeal when allowing an appeal against sentence.

Their Lordships reduced from three years to six months prison sentences passed on Benito Giuseppi Ardani, now aged 21, aged 20 at trial, at Southampton Crown Court (Judge Smithies) on pleas of guilty to four counts of theft from cars, taking a conveyance without authority, and damaging cars, with 18 other offences taken into consideration.

Additionally their Lordships Additionally their Lordships imposed on the appellant a mandatory period of six months' disqualification from holding or obtaining a driving licence in lieu of a 12-month period, which was a nullity because it had not been announced in court.

the previous court and the powers conferred by them had accordingly been available to that court when dealing with him instead of the powers which were in fact available Mr Charles Pugh, assigned by the Registrar of Criminal Appeals, for the appellant, Mr Michael Warsley as amicus curiae.

MR JUSTICE BINGHAM, giving the court's judgment, said that the judge when passing sentence last February took the view that exemplary sentences were called for because of the wantonness and malevolence of the offences and their prevalence in the area.

However, if their Lordships were m a position to do so, they would be minded to impose sentences of between 12 months to two years youth custody.

Difficulty arose because nn May 24 two things occurred first, sections 1 to 15 of the Criminal Justice Act 1982 came into operation; and, second, by chance on the same day the appellant became 21 years of age, so that he had attained that age between the sentence passed below and the hearing on appeal,

In approaching the appeal their Lordships were governed by particularly section 11(3) of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 – namely that on an appeal against sentence, if they considered that the appellant should be sentenced differently for an offence for which he was dealt with by the court below, they might "(a) quash any sentence ... which is the subject of the appeal; and (b) in place of it pass such senten-

The questinns were whether their Lordships' court was a court in which it fell to determine how a previous court might have deal with the appellant. Theirs was not the nnly court which might have to make such a determination - for example a lower court might have to respect to a hreach of probation order or canditional discharge or the unavoidable answer was that there was a lacuna in the Act, since the court on appeal could impose neither horstal if that was thought to be appropriate nor a sentence of youth custody, hun found itself bound by the provision (now abolished) that the sentence of imprisonment had to he six months or less or three years or more.

Nevertheless, three years was excessive and with considerable the court shall so exercise their powers under this subsection that, taking the case as a whole, the appellant is not more severely dealt with on appeal than he was dealt with by the court below."

If their Lordships took the view that the proper sentence was borstal training nr youth custody complications arose because borstal training was abolished by section 1(3) of the 1982 Act, and obviously the court could not impose a penalty which no longer existed. For previous offences the appellant was liable to at least nine additional penalty points. The total additional penalty points. The total led to an obligation on the court to disqualify for a minimum period of

From R v Kent (Peter) (The Times May 13) two relevant points clearly emerged: (1) that the court could not order the endorsement of penalty points and disqualify nn the same occasion; and (2) the court's order was that which was pronounced in

The present sentence had two ices: first, endorsement with penalty points were endorsed and

What was the effect of the failure? That led to a further problem.

As the senience had been reduced from three years to six munths, it seemed clear that in impose, as should always have been done, a mandatory sentence of disqualifi-cation did not make the sentence as a whole more severe.

the disqualification order was made not in open court.

The answer was: it was to render the purported disqualification a nullity. Was it open to their Lordships, making a substantial reduction in aperiod of imprisonment, to order period of imprisonment, to order disqualification or would it represent a breach of section 11(3) in the 1968 Act by making the exercise in powers? "taking the case as a whole", such that the appellant was more severely dealt with appeal than he was dealt with by the court the mid-70s meant a little more than a stable source of supply and possible ebeaper fuel for Mr Graham Neilson and Mr Richard Tyekiff. They saw it as the chance to establish themselves as the world's leading passive fire protection experts.

Reform even the first oil rig Before even the first oil rig began drilling they realized the need to protect the platforms and living quarters from the high risk of fire. So they formed Azonite and together with the Aaronite and together with the mining finance group Rio-Thro Zipe developed a passive fire proofing chemical which could 20 times earnings. be sprayed on to the platform. The oil companies were also Trinidad and Tobego will pull out of the world Masters Games in Puerto Rico in September if South Africa take part. Charles Agnoo, secretary of the Trinidad and Tobego Masters (track and field) Association, said yesterday that he understood that South Africans are likely to complete against them in Puerto Rico and, if this is confirmed, Trinidad and Tobago will oot be taking part. The Games are scheduled to be held in San Juan, Puerto Rico, from September 23 to 30 and a Trinidad team of 25 has already been selected.

FENCING: Vassil Etropolski, of Bulgaria, won the men's individual sabre event at the world championships yesterday to give his country its first world ofte in the sport. Etropolski beat Gianfranco Dalla Barba, of Italy, 10-8 in the final, recovering from a shaky start and wiping out a 4-2 lead by the Italian. On his way to victory, Europolski had to beat his twin brother Hristo, who like Dalla Barba had won all his previous duels in the tournament, in the semi-fnals. Julian Hipwood, England's captain, who plays off the top harional handicap of nine and was brilliantly mounted by his French patron, Guy brother. Howard, gave him consistently staunch support at back. Charles Beresford, although far less experienced, filled the linchpin No 3 position admirably and Alan Kent was fast and furious as ever at No I. In this very open game the New Zealanders, firmly end skilfully captained by the eight-gooler. Stuart Mackenzie, played a first-class team game, but England ist had the edge in dash and speed. The score was 6-6 in the final chukka when Howard Hipwood scored from a close penalty shot, after a cross in the goalmouth by Forsyth, and Julian Hipwood then hit a beauty from the open to secure the trophy

Gooch's power puts Essex out of their misery

LEICESTER: Essex (4pts) beat Leicestershire on a faster scoring

At the end of n miserable week in which they lost in the NatWest and Benson and Hedges competitions, Essex beat Leicestershire thanks to a powerful unbeaten 41 from Graham Gooch. Needing 64 from 10 overs in a ram-restriced match, Essex won with nine balls to spare.

Emburey turns Kent off course

By Richard Streeton

Canterbury: Middlesex (4 pts) beat Keat by 56 runs. Kent's challenge in the John Palyer League was checked by Middlesex yesterday Graham Johnson's benetit match. Set to make 228 to win. Kent were let down by their middle-order batting as Emburey took three wickers without cost in eight balls it was an efficient all-round display by Middlesex, who showed no signs of reaction from Saturday's sterring

The Muddlesex romnes owed everything to Gatting And Tomlina that it finished as positively as it did after they were put in. Radley and Slack made a sound start even if 70 from 10 overs was a shade too dedate to be ideal by Sunday standards. These two fell in successive overs: Radley was caught at deep mid-on; Slack's middle stump was hit as he dreve down the wrong line. The total was only 85 when Ellis was caught right handed above his head by Baptiste at deep mid-off. Then Gatting and Tomhins put on 82 in 10 overs, of which Gatting struck the ball with enormous force but often in the air and he survived four chances. A SIX against Underwood aver long-off struck a small boy on the head in the top tier of the stand. The boy went off to have his head bandaged and was able to return later and watch the game from the player's balcony. A second six against Dilley hy Gatting sent the ball soaring over CXITS COVET.

Gatting had already been given two lives in the niver in which he was out. He lofted Dilley once more into the deep and Johnson at long-off ran to his right to take a holliant catch. After this, Timiling came into his own and he and Emburev pulled and drove freely as 60 came from Kent's start was promising with 50 coming in 10 overs before they promising left-arm medium fast bowler, completed eight tidy overs off the reel and took two wickets. Woolmer pulled a catch to short mid-wicket and Tayare was caught behind trying in steer the ball to their man.

third man Aslett hit Edmonds for six over extra cover before he gave the same bowler a return catch. Kent were 22 for three from 26 overs and with Benson gathering runs smoothly they still seemed well placed. Embures, though, changed the course of the match, Benson was out to a well sudged catch at long-off. Cowdrey skied one to mid-off and Baptiste swung wildly Daniel's return gave the remaining batsmen no chance to pull the match out of

When tea was taken at the estraordinary hour of 6.20 (the regulations say that the tea interal shall be at 4.30 or after 25 overs of the innings of the side batting second, whichever is the later) many in the crowd made for home, disappointed at having seen such a one-sided game. Needing only 197 to win, Essex were a comfortable 113 for one and the light was holding up well.

Yet for the second time in four days Essex, to their dismay, managed to turn victory into defeat, to the NatWest Bank Tropby last Wenesday, against Kent at Chimsford, they had reached 233 for two, needing 275, when the wheels came off. On Saturday they passed 150 with only three wickers down and still with 18 overs left.

But just as Kent had done. Middlesex kept at them, encouraged by the fact that when eventually the shadows began to creep across the ground, so Essex started to struggle for runs. At 135, in the thirty-first over, Fletcher was well caught by Radley at silly point, fielding aimost at the end of the bar. At 151 Pont, io trying to avoid a rising ball, was struck on the helmey and hit his wicket. At 156 Hardie, by then completely becalmed, was caught at the wicker off Cowans, last 25 runs had taken 32 overs.

Peine though and Turner put for runs. At 135 in the thirty-first

Pringle, though, and Turner put Essex back oo course. At the start of the fifty-second over the score was 185 for six, with a pair of Easts, buth useful batsmen, to come, should another wicket fall. A nudge here and a nick there and Essex were home. It was arrived work but they were not, surely, going to throw this one away. Even when Pringle was leg-before to Daniel, at 185, Middlesex seemed to have left it too

But the lights glowed like street lamps by now. Dinner dates had been long forgotten. Williams went down with cramp, as though it was down with cramp, as though it was extra time at Wembley. Having completed his few remaining balls he left the field, his place taken by John Corr, son of Donald, sceretary of the Test and County Cricket Board, a fine fielder by all accounts but unaccustomed to the darkness and inexperienced in such dramas Turner decided it was time he settled it, once and for all, Hard, and

The man of the match was Clive The man of the match was Clive Radley. That, too, was perfect, Radley being a real son of the game. His 89 not out had held the Middlesex innings together. Foster had delighted with the promise of his bowling and run Gatting out with a long and powerful throw. Barlow had set the match going with the cracking chats through the at head height, he drove Cowans towards the Pavilion, a certain four had Carr, moving easily to his left at deep mid-on, not plucked the down, two-handed and without a tremor. What it is to be young! Carr seemed o little surprised by the fuss which famous men, veterans of many Test matches, made of him. At the end of the day Gooch's dismissal could be seen to have been crucial. Having made 46 oot of 79 in only 11 overs, and towered above the rest in the way he played, he was out to an unworthy stroke. Had he stayed a little longer Middlesex could never have come back as they Cowans's fortunes were exactly those of his side. After two overs to Gooch, the first of them costing 16 runs, he had to be taken off, But he n was who had the last word.

In the hours between, Gatting matured visibly and impressively as a captain. He got everything right, grateful, I am sure, to have studied under Brearley. Downtoo revealed not only the agility but also the eye of a cat in taking Cowans and Daniel.

The 22 overs of Edmonds and Emburey were a telling factor, they were the best of the Middlesex bowlers. Middlesex were splendid in the field; Essex had not been quite as good. The crowd not only loved

Puzzle of the practice Green

By Lewine Mair

At 50, Charlie Green, who defeated John Huggan by one hole to retain his Scottish amateur title at Gullane, finds that his coocentration holds out for oo more than an hour and a half of a time oo the practice ground. But it is all very different when h enmes to the rea thing.
Through the first eight of his nine championship rounds at Gullane, Green was a total of 19 under par. When, on Saturday afternoon Huggan several times threatened to take the lead, Green fended him off io manner which had everyone ruing the fact that he is no longer prepared to play for Scotland.

"Never mind Scotland", his 23year-old opponent said, be ought still to be playing in the Walker

Cup."

Five down after 10 holes in the morning, Huggan had a spring in his stride when, after holing a nasty five-foot putt at the eighteenth to be round in 71 to Green's 68, he went ioto linnch only three holes to the bad. He then won three of the first four holes of the afternoon to draw level, only for Green, with his long years of experience, calmly to start working on a new lead.

Over the last 14 holes Green twice got back to two ahead and each time Huggan clawed his way back to square. At the seventeenth, however, the holder had a lucky break which enabled him ooce more to escape from his tenacious opponent and "that sinking feeling" which had been with him for most of the afternoon.

The eighteenth on Gullane One, with its strategically placed hunkers

The eighteenth on Gullane One, with its strategically placed bunkers, is oot the easiest of places to protect a one hole lead, but Green, after a ten-shot he felt was at once "cautious and cutty", hit a marvellously positive nine iron to within 10ft of the hole. It was a shot so good that it took a heavy toll of Huggan's last hopes. Huggan's last hopes.

Amateur seed a non-starter

Andrew Oldcorn, the Englishman handew Ordcorn, the Englishman based to Edinburgh, begins his defence of the English amateur championship at Wentworth today. Oldcorn, the first British player to win all four matches to a Walker Cup international against the United States, is one of eight seeded players. However, only sever will be players. However only seven will be taking part, as Martin Thompson, the 1982 British amateur champioo from Middlesbroogh, nursed pro-fessional a few days ago.

Officials of the English Goif Union have resisted pressure to follow the lead of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club, who this year changed the format of the British amateur championship to a stroke-olay qualifying competition.

CYCLING

Fignon the cunning artisan comes home a national hero

When Bernard Hinault withdrew before the start of the Tour de France three weeks ago, little could be have thought that the name of one of his young team riders would join his four inclusions on the list of nnners.

By winning the Tour at his first ttempt, Laurent Fignon is being ailed as a cyclist who can succeed hailed as a cyclist who can succeed Hinault as the top man in the sport. Perhaps this praise is a little premature. Because of his anonymity, Fignon was able to race through the first half of the Tour without any effort. When be moved into second place behind Pascal Simon, another Frenchman, it was by cunning rather than strength.

On his first day in the yellow jersey, Simon crashed and fractured this left shoulder-blade, and for the next six days Fignon quietly tens tent snoulder-blace, and for the next six days Fignon quietly conserved his energy, waiting for Simon to relinquish the lead. Simon's inevitable retirement came last Monday in the Alpa, since when Fignon has been fully stretched to have on this advantage.

Fignon has been fully stretched to hang on to his advantage.
With victory virtually assured. Fignon went into the final weekend with a comfortable lead, and all his doubts removed. It was of no great surprise therefore, when the Frenchman won the 50 Kilometres time trial at Dijon on Saturday' and yesterday when he made such a valiant attempt to win the final stage.

valiant attempt to win the final stage.

Coming into the final coroer, Figuon was in front, with Sean Kelly in his slipstream. It looked a certain stage win for the Irishman, but Gilbert Glaus of Switzerland and Eugene Urbany of Luxembourg came from behind before Kelly made his finishing effort. Kely quickly changed his trajectory.

sprinted by Urbany, but was still half a wheel behind the Swiss rider half a wheel behind the Swiss rider as they crossed the line.

Kelly's disappointment followed that of Stephen Roche, the other Irish rider, who was third at Dijon after looking the winner for much of the race. Second place in that time the race. Second packs in that time trial went to Angel Arroyo of Spain, 35 seconds behind Fignon, a performance good enough to clinch second place overall for Arroyo, only five seconds ahead of Peter Winnen of the Netherlands. Fourth whiten of the Nederlands. You'ld place overall finally went to Lucien van Impe: the Belgian champion. This was the Belgian; fourth Tour de France, and be has finished every time – a record.

The English-speaking riders did better than ever before. The two Irishmen distinguished themselves, with Kelly winning the points and rush sprint competitions, while Peoche woo the speak for host time Roche woo the award for best time trialist. Also among the top 15 finishers were Phil Anderson, of Australia, Jonathan Boyer, from California, and Robert Millar, from Fignon is the first Parisian to win the Tour de France for 50 years, and this made his success even more popular with the husge crowds on the Champs Elysées yesterday. The fact that Fignoo rides for the same team as Hinault greatly facilitated his victory. His previous best performances were seventh in the performances were seventh in the tour of Spain two months ago, and fifteenth in last year's tour of Italy; Hinzult won both races.

For most of the French public, Fignon's only previous claim to fame was his televised crash in the Blois-Chaville Classic race last autumn. He was leading the race by

Hardcastle on song in medley

Sarah Hardcastle (Borough of Redbridge) finally emerged from the shadow of her more illustrious collegue Jackie Willmott, to win her first title in the 400 metres individual medley on the closinng day of the national championships in Coventry.

Fourteen year old Miss Har-deastle tackled the most gruelling event in the programme with guts commitment which belied her 5ft Sin almost waif like physique. She was never headed over the eight lengths and four strokes, in spite of being a oear novice among more experienced rivals in an event, which is notoriously punitive of faulty pacing.

Miss Hardcastle's time of 4min 55.17sec was the fastest by a Briton this year, which a ply legiumises her victory in danger of being devalued by the disqualification in the heats of Gaynor Stanley (Wigan Wasps).

the pre-race favourite. Miss Hardcastle is oow sure to be named for this event for the European championships in Rome in August in addition to the 400 in August in addition to the 400 metres and 800 metres freestyle, for which she has already achieved qualifing times and which are her specialities. But before then she swims in the European junior championship in two week's time. At this meeting she could well win two or three minor medals. Only the supreme East Germans can prevent her from striking gold.

Sukova: a streaky

Yet the players maintained as admirable standard of tennis in a metch embellished by the contrast between them - with Miss Mandlikova gracefully gifted and always prepared to gamble and Miss Jaeger relatively girlish in her demeanour, but more discreet in her respect for the odds. In the third set Miss Mandlikovs cut a knee in a fall, played on with blood streamin down her shin, but won the mate with an ace that was called n fault but was conceded by Miss Jaeger.

Yesterday Miss Sukova beat Miss Kohde, aged 19. Both are well over 6ft tall and have the spirit of youth in them: which is to say that they have a taste for adventure. They were always aggressive but always thoughtful. Miss Sukova, whose muther reached the 1962 Wimbledoo final, is a streaky player who played her tidiest tennis at the beginning and end of the match. The policeman from Canada gets his prize

By Our Shooting Correspondent Alain Marion, a French-Canadian policeman, won the Queen's Prize at Bisley on Saturday for the second time in three years. In 1972 he had tied for first place but was beaten on a ticbreaker, before winning for the first time in 1980.

Oucen's silver medal for top score Queen's silver medal for top score in the semi-final. In the second stage, fired at 300, 500 and 600 yards, there were five competitors with 150, the highest possible: Marion. Simon Belither. John Hadfield, Keith Pugh and Paul Drew. However. Marion was the only one to put in a second complete score in the debreaker.

This meant the five started the This meant the five started the final on equal terms, and after the final on equal terms, and after the first half, at 900 yards, Hadfield, who had shot 72 out of 75, was in the lead under pressure from the men he equalled in the semi-final, plus James Willcox, of Wolver-hampton, and Peter Papasideris, another Canadan, who had put on Marion ensured his win by scoring 69 at 1,000 yards, with Papasideris and Willcox only a point behind. Papasideris won the runner-up's silver badge with a final stage total one point better than Willcox.

RACING: TIME CHARTER HAS NOTABLE TRIUMPH IN THE KING GEORGE

Time Charter is now an 8-1 was good to see Lord Wein-chance to become the seventh stock, one of Mercer's former filly in the past 11 years to win employers, saluting this suthe Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe. Her devastating sprint past Diamond Shoal and Sun Prin-Her devastating sprint past Like Candy, Mercer was quick Diamond Shoal and Sun Printopay tribute to the injured cess at Ascot on Saturday, made Billy Newnes, who watched the Robert Barnett's four-year-old, race from the stands. "We had a the first of her sex to complete the remarkable treble of the King George VI and Queen Elizabeth Diamond Stakes, the Duhai Champion Stakes and the Oaks. "She'll definitely go to Paris," said Henry Candy yesterday, "the Benson and Hedges Gold Cup is a possible earlier target, but nowadays Time Charter really needs a mile and a half."

Not for nothing is the Diamond Stakes known as the show case of British racing. The whole afternoon sparkles with a sense of occasion. Both the but Time Charter's in terrific vanquished as well as the victorious were quick to ac-knowledge this afterwards. "This is the race that matters" said Ian Balding, the trainer of Diamond Shoal, who was the first to offer his congratulation to Candy, and similarly Dick Hern, who said "Sun Princess ran n marvellous race. The slow early pace was against her, but I was still thrilled."

The great race certainly fulfilled all previous expectations. The moment of truth arrived as Caerleon lost two front shoes and started to bend. Lester Pagott thenset sai for home on Diamond Shoal, and Sun Princess. Joe Mercer had moved Time Charter into a challenging positioo on the outside of this trio.

The 48-year-oldjockey bad timed the filly's effort to perfection. And in the final dash beat Diamond Shoal by three quarters of a length with Sun now be trained for the Arc. Princess a length away third. back in triumph to the winners

The trainer himself is so relaxed that he would make the Sundance Kid a positive bundle of nerves. Time Charter gave Candy a gentle nudge of greeting as he stood proudly but casually by her head. "Hello, old girl," was his only comment. "She is a friendly person, she likes talking to people," he explained yesterday morning, "I've got a bit of a headache, shape. She's just about halfway through a packet of peppermints at the moment."

Let no one be deceived by this low key approach. Candy is a master of his trade and a professional to his fingertips. After Time Charter's earlier injury, which caused her to miss the Coronation Cup, it represented an outstanding feat of training to have produced her in such peak of condition.

Just as Time Charter was a chance mount for Mercer, owing to Newnes's accident, so, weaken approaching the final too, was Piggott, attempting to win his seventh Diamond Stakes on Diamond Shoal because of Steve Cauthen's and the pair turned into because of Steve Cauthen's thestraight tracked by Awaasif suspension. Lester thinks we might have won if he'd been able to kick for home a little later, said Balding but Rocamadour forced his hand by suddenly rushing up to the leaders half a mile out."

This is certainly true, but it is to the line, Time Charter's hard to believe that Time finishing speed was too much Charter would not have prefor her two rivals. Time Charter vailed, however the race had been run. Diamond Shoal will win the Yorkshire Oaks and finish third in last season's Arc.

The customary pre-race tension was heightened by Lehmi Gold unseating Freddie Head before the start and by the last minute withdrawal of Khair-"He was standing there quietly when he suddenly went mad", said Fulke Johnson Houghton "Khairpour was stung by something on his nearside flank. He dislodged a plate and hurt himself slightly. We'll have to see if he recovers in time for the Prix Kergolay at Deauville on August 7.*

The most unsatisfactory aspsect of the race was the premature disappearance from the scene of Caerleon. The incident was not only a bitter blow for Vincent O'Brien, but seeing the value of the Irish Derby form tested. Caerleon was certainly travelling better than any horse except Time Charter at the time of the mishap. Captain Nicholas Beaumont the elerk of the course, reported that the two dislodged racing plates were picked up just before the bend ioto the home straight.

The other feature of the day was the victory of Keen in the Granville Maiden Stakes. Henry Cecil was delighted with the way in which Lord Howard de Walden's full brother to Kris and Diesis beat August. "Keen was by no means fully wound said the four times champion trainer.

Cecil is obviously looking forward to Goodwood where Vacarme, Precocious and Trojan Fen all appear to have outstanding chances. Apart from his disappointment with Caerleon, Robert

Sangster had an otherwise successful afternoon. He started the afternoon on a good note when the blinkered Sheriff Muir, and Maxine Carvalino, beat Tender Sovereign and the favourite, Lord Protector in the Tiffany Diamond Stakes, San-gster has also bought Mrs. Barry Hills's half share in Desirable, the decisive conqueror of Rocket Alert in the Princess Margaret Stakes.

Masarika proves too good for Superlative

ia crei

French Racing Correspondent The Aga Khan's brilliant Masariconfirmed her position as France's leading two-year-old in mking the Prix Robert Papun at Maisons-Laffitte by a comfortable half a length from the English colt, Superistive. Lester Piggott was two and a half lengths away third on Harifa and then came Ruby Green who was six lengths in front of the Canadiaa filly. Elegant Act.

Masarika came through to take the lead just over a furious from home and then began to idle as Superlative kept up the gallop. So Yves Sain-Martis shook his partner up with a few slaps of the wbip before his mount went on to win slightly more comfortably than the official half a length distance

It was the first group one win for Alain de Royer-Dupre, who took over the Aga Khan's horses from the late Francois Mathet at the beginning of the season and he said after the race. "Now it's the Prix Mornay. She was a little short of sead early on its still a little second. speed early on, is still a little green and will be better over longer distances. The young Frenchman concludes: "Massrika is quite exceptional and probably a real

With fluent Norwegian and o working knowledge of Swedish. Danish and Dutch, Lise, who is 25, was lucky enough to be able to spend three mooths as a journalist writing for a Norwegian daily oewspaper. But all the trainees reckoned that any media experience would be an asset. Most undergraduates do not use enough initiative in exploring local media channels while they are still at university, Sarah states, and adds: "A degree alone is simply not enough".

That is what Brian Shand, who holds a PhD in French Interature from University College, London, found when he applied to be a TV producer after graduating in 1976. Despite having had a summer job with the BBC three years earlier, his numerous letters of applications got him nowhere with the TV companies, although he was offered, and turned down, a job with his present employer.

Brian, who is now 29, then went hack to university to take his PhD and did a spell as an assistant lecturer before being forced back into the job market last autumn by the university cuts. At his point he wrote to more than 30 other PR consultancies without success before "in desperation" he "plucked up enough nerve to reapproach Burson-Marsteller.

and opportunities change - particularly in small organizations like PR consultancies, which rarely employ more than 100 - people. The probability is that no more than about 3,000 people all told are employed in PR consultancies in Private.

Although many more are employed in government departments and large firms, the total annual intake of new recruits from all sources into public relations is probably o few hundred people. With so few openings available, a refusal carries no personal stigma. At any rate, although Brian went through o full screening, taken on as a personal assistant to the chairman in January. This gave him entry to the graduate trainee scheme.

Susan Hall, a very poised 23year-old and the fourth of the trainees, took a one-year MA course in London after getting her BA in graphics at Canterbury College of Art, mainly because she felt she needed time to mature. Two years into her first degree course, she realized she was more interested in management then in artistic exccution. She then toured all the large adversing agencies ond a number of PR consultancies asking for advice about qualifications.

"It rapidly became apparent that while a degree in graphics didn't count for much - no degree at oll would count for even less", she says. While the MA course itself did not, she feels, teach her o great deal ("I might as well have done a correspondence course") it did at least give her sufficient confidence to tockle the four long-weekend sessions at Ashridge Management College which are incorporated into the six-month traince consultants

• Dr Anthony Clare's successful radio series of revealing interviews has been transferred to television with George Best, the wayward football genius, the first guest of MOTIVES (BBC 210.10pm) The transition is only partly successful. Whether or not Mr Best tound the Soluting or the cameras as deunting. ighting or the cameras as daunting as his inquisitor the effect was that he seemed transfixed - hardly moving and with a half-smile pression throughout. Nor did Dr are unearth anything new about Best'a erratic behaviour - the alcoholism, the bar-room brawls, broken marriage and his string of affairs with pretty girls. What does emerge is Best's insecurities stemming from his leaving his Beliast home at the age of 15 to play football in Manchester. His precocious skill brought him

Birth struggle: A child being examined by a barefoot doctor

Eritrea: A country within a country

"We didn't know he was so bad", said Sahla Giolom's father as we sat watching his son lying, staring vacantly at the wall of the tent. Each day

he wait of the tent. "Each day he would go ont with the hullocks looking for forage – hut then one day he couldn't get up – so I carried him here."
"Here" was a talented clinic in Felki, Eritrea, run hy the Eritrean People's Liberation Front, and Sahia Giotom was starving to dcalh. Help was too late. He is probably dead.

Sahia Giotom's father and his fellow peasants were dis-possessed by the British in 1951, hulchered by Haile Selassie's forces in the late 1950's, bombed by the American-hacked regime in the 1960s, napalmed and nervegassed by the Russian-backed administration in the 1970s and now find themselves up against a Russian equipped, trained and led Ethiopian Army which is being gratuitously fed with American and EEC food.

As if that wasn't enough, they also suffered considerably durin the great Sahelian drought of the late 1960s and early 1970s and are in the midst of a drought which appears to be of equal severity. For the past three years the family have wandered around the barren uplands of Eritrea's central provinces searching for Eritrean guerrillas fighting the Soviet-backed Ethiopian Government are showing remarkable administrative skills in governing their country within a country. Ian Robinson, an agricultural and rural development adviser who has spent 13 years in the Middle East and Africa, reports on his recent visit to the region.

a place with enough water to sustain a meagre subsistance crop of millet, and enough natural vegetation to aupport their two hullocks. Cut off from their traditional areas of refuge hy military action, they failed and returned to their original village, their seeds eaten, their hullocks too feehle to work and their son dying. Sahla's father represent' the majority of Eritrean peasants who have opted for the traditional methods of survival during times of hardship – tinerance and hierarchical dependancy. Unfortunately, neither system is adequate to deal with the combined forces that man and nature here stacked against them.

But not all the population have stuck to those two options. Over the past 22 years an armed struggle between the liberation movement and Ethiopia's armed forces has been waged leading to an exodus of waged leading to an exodus of some 400,000 Eritrean refugees, the creation of 10 refugee camps within Eritrea itself accommodating 65,000 people and the formation of one of the most skilled and motivated fighting forces in Africa, the Eritrean People's Liberation Front.

Liberation Front. When I visited the EPLF's base area in the mountainous province of Sahel recently, I followed a food convoy along dry river beds and up mountain passes along roads that had been non-existent four years

According to the driver, the organization's road building skills had been derived from the Italians, "They didn't teach Armed struggle: A woman EPLF fighter. Photographs: Mike Goldwater us much," he said, "but they taught us how to huild roads." And so following Russian intervention on Ethiopia's side in 1978, which led to a strategic withdrawal of the EPLF's fighters into the base area; roads, offices, hospitals and wells have been built in a remarkahly short time.

The Front's activities are directed from underground offices equipped with all the trappings of modern African ministries except the bureaucracy and the corruption. Like every fighter, the adminis-trators have been through a year's training.

At the moment the EPLF's priorities are understandably militarily hiased, followed by immediate relief activites and the development of the health and education services. Yet in every village I found adults being taught basic literacy and numeracy. This will have a remarkable impact, with pea-sant women the chief benefici-

However, the question remains, how long can the Eritrean people resist an Ethiopian Government supported by both East (arms) and West (food and development

According to a senior EPLF official the Russian Ambassa-dor in Sudan has already claimed that the elimination of the Eritrean problem would be simple - as there are "only three million of them." But it may out be as easy as all that if the EPLF can conduct its military operations with the efficiency it shows in administ-

Challenge to Gemayel rule in Lebanon

there is no doubt that Mr Jumblatt's coalition is going to be the de facto administration in the Syrian-occupied area, doing nothing that would offend

Meanwhile another truce was agreed yesterday between Christians and Druze in the Israelioccupied Chouf mountains after the two sides had spent hours firing shells and rockets at each other around the village of Kfarshima,

The suburban skyline above west Beirut was lit up for most of Saturday night by bright explosions and red tracer bullets.

Israeli tank crews fired a few desultory rounds at both militias but otherwise did not bother to intervene. ● TEL AVIV: Two key Israeli ministers will fly to Washington today to d8scuss developments in Lebanon with President Reagan in place of Mr. Begin, the Prime Minister, who last week cancelled his scheduled visit to the White House. Mr Yitshak Shamir, Foreign Minister, and Mr Moshe Arens, the Defence Minister, were invited by the President in a message to the Prime Minister recived yesterday, and the Cabinet quickly anthorized the journey.

Announcing the Cabinet decision, Mr Dan Meridor, the spokesman, said the talks will zave repercussions in Lebanon, but the government expected to go ahead with last week's decision to pull back to the Awali river and return some 200 sty miles in the Beirut area and the Chouf mountains to Lebanese sovereignty.

However, some Israelis said this decision may have to be reexamined now that Lebanon appeared to be on the brink of a renewed civil war.

Maariv said in an editorial that Israel could not be indifferent when the Druze in the Chonf mountains, who were almost totally identified with the Syrians, confronted the Lebanese authorities to prevent them from taking over territory to be evacuated by the Israelis.

Notwithstanding Israel's wish to stay out of inter-communal sputes and the objections of the Israel public to having soldiers patrol the Chouf, Israel could not withdraw and shake off responsibility for the cousequences, the paper said.

Mr Begin's personal reasons for postponing his Washington mission had not yet been officially defined.

The mayor, in shirtsiceves, took his place in a bunning-decked dais with some senior police officers. A young black policeman stepped forward and began to sing the national anthem in a clear and powerful voice, his head thrown back so that he seemed to project the words at the skyscraper counting-houses of Wali Street. The people put their hands on their hearts. It demonstrated one of the differences between them and us: one could not imagine a bobby singing God Save the Queen in such circumstances. It would seem bizarre and embarrassing.

But a solo rendering of "The Star Spangled Banner" is a feature of many public functions America. The anthem is not a dirge like the British one and it celebrates an event and an ideal rather than a person and an institution. In any case, Americans are less selfconscious about patriotic rituals, and more serious about them. They are more respectful to their flag, for example. Children are tanght at summer camps how to fold it and to avoid dropping and thereby desecrating it.

Its vulgar use in com-merce is forbidden by law, while Britons cheerfully make pants and paper bags out of the Union Jack.

When the policeman had completed his magnificent performance attention turned to the dogs, or canines as they were called. of American usage, so often slangful, snappy and pithy,

Their reintroduction is in keeping with the new approach to tackling crime in the city, an increase in uniformed patrois and an emphasis on special programmes aimed at certain kinds of criminal. The programmes, incidentally, seem to be effective, the latest figures showing a reduction in burglaries and robberies, so that the city has become a little safer

Six of the dogs will work in Central Park, famous for its lanes, dells and meadows, and notorious for its muggers; and the other six will join the transport police in the fight against robbers and hooligans in the crowded subway sys-

Apart from the deterrent value of their lupine jaws. the dogs have what policemen lack: sheer speed in pursuit of fleeing criminals. New York police, unlike some others, are not supposed to shoot at unarmed people running away from them; and the dogs will give them a longer arm,

The newly-trained dogs and their handlers mounted the dais to be presented to the mayor and officials. They were followed by the people ho had saved the taxpayers' money by responding to a police appeal for German shepherd pups These loyal citizens received certificates of appreciation, New York's MBE, a round of applause and a pat on the back from the mayor. Thus, with the anthem, bigwigs and what Americans call pizzazz. New York made what might otherwise have been (It is one of the paradoxes a mundane event into something of an occasion.

The only birds singing steadily now, apart for the indefatigable wren, are the corn hunting and be heard from far away over the dusty lanes and yellowing fields. House-sparrows chirp together all day: they probably emit more sounds than any other birds in the course of a year. At the site in Southern England where they now breed with some regularity, golden orioles still produce a mellow whistle in the treetops; but one rarely sees more than a flash of the gold body and hlack wings as they dart through the foliage. Grass is oo longer a green plant but a predominantly white one, as the steed heads soften and the stems dry in the sun. The large white bells of convolvulus clamber over the hedges; field hindweed, their small pink or white relative, sprawls over car parks and rubbish heaps. The pale green clumps of mugwort acquire a rusty took as hundreds of tiny brown flowers open on them. The berries of the cuckoo-pint are turning orange. In chalk country, marbled white butterflies are appearing: they are often found in large, isolated colonies, feeding and sonning themselves on knapweed and thistles.
